U.S. Blocks Ethiopian Oil Grant

Standard Oil Subsidiary's Officers Give Pledge to Hull

Company's Heads Come Here to Volunteer Information.

Standard Vacuum Group Interested

Corporation Will Move at Once to Cancel Concessions.

By Felix Bruner.

The Ethiopian oil concession, under which Emperor Haile Selassie deeded half his kingdom to American interests for exploration and exploitation, was canceled yesterday at the demand of the United States Government.

Secretary Hull, announcing that the deal would be called off immediately, revealed that it was made by a subsidiary of the Standard Vacuum Co., which is itself a subsidiary of the Secony-Vacuum Oil Co., and the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Announcement that the arrangement had been called off followed conferences at the State Department yesterday, attended by officials of the Standard Vacuum Co. They are George S. Walden, chairman of the board, and H. Dundas, vice president.

Hull said these officials were told "that the granting of this concession had been the cause of great embarrassment not only to this Government, but to other governments who are making strenuous and sincere efforts for the preservation of peace."

Conference Is Voluntary.

"In the circumstances," Hull said, "the company officials were informed of the view of this Government that it was highly desirable that the necessary steps should be taken at the earliest possible moment to terminate the present concession."

Hull said Walden and Dundas came to the State Department voluntarily to inform him that the African Exploration and Development Co., which made the concession agreement, was owned by the Standard Vacuum Oil Co.

The two men arrived at the State Department shortly before noon. They returned in the afternoon for a further conference and Hull made

Soviet Decrees Death for Spies

Sentencing of Trio Is Reply to Japanese Protest on Comintern.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Sept. 3.—Three former officers of White Russian armies accused of entering the Soviet Union through Manchukuo as spies were sentenced to death today at Irkutsk close on the heels of a Japanese protest here against activities of the Comintern, the Third (Communist) International.

In response to the Japanese demarche the Soviet goverment had drawn the Japanese Ambassador's attention to what is called anti-Soviet activities of White Russians in Manchukuo.

The Japanese protest was promptly rejected, as was the similar recent one of the United States.

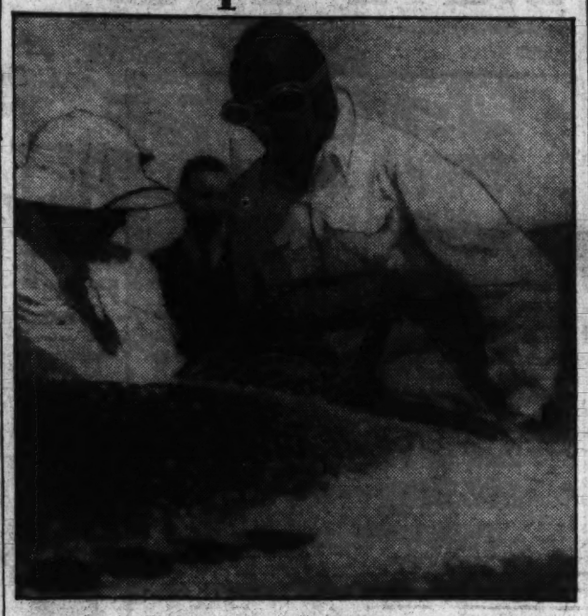
Those sentenced to death were former Col. I. Kobylkin and former Lieuts. E. Perelazoff and V. Alenikoff.

In connection was the Japanese protest it was learned the Chinese Minister raised the question of Comintern activities in a recent conversation with Soviet authorities, but no formal protest was lodged.

Previous protests had been made by England, Italy and Latvia, in addition to the United States.

The three former officers were said by Soviets to have confessed they entered Russian territory from Manchukuo as spies to incite and commit acts of terrorism on behalf of a foreign power.

Campbell Hits 299 For Speed Record



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Sir Malcolm Campbell, shown clambering out of the salt-coated Bluebird after he had broken the world's automobile speed record.

Giant Bluebird Blows Tire at 304 Miles an Hour on First Run Over Utah Salt Beds; Briton Disappointed at Failure to Average 300 Miles.

By the United Press.

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 3.—Sir Malcolm Campbell, Britain's little middle-aged knight of speed, rocketed across the glaring surface of a Utah salt bed in his monster Bluebird car today to lift his own land speed record to the breath-taking figure of 299.874 miles per hour.

On the first run over the 13-mile course, with a slight wind on its giant tail, the five-ton, 2,500-horsepower machine blazed through the measured mile in 11.83 seconds at a speed of 304.311, almost 28 miles an hour faster than the mark Campbell established on the sands of Daytona Beach last spring. Nearing the end of the clocked mile when he was traveling 300, he blew a tire on his left front wheel but by some miracle the "Ol' Lady," as Sir Malcolm affectionately calls his car, did not even swerve. Splitting the course like a bullet, he rolled to an easy stop.

Forced by the A. A. A. racing rules to make both his runs within an hour for official timing, Campbell and his mechanics worked hurriedly over the Bluebird after the initial run. He had only eight minutes left when the Bluebird finally was declared ready and again placed on the starting line.

Sir Malcolm, worry written on his face, climbed in, lashed the canvas lifebelts, and waved to his men to give him a rolling start. A few seconds later the Bluebird, roaring like all the demons below, thundered across the salt course.

Although he was not hampered by tire or mechanical trouble, Campbell was unable to do better than 295.56 on the final run. He blamed a slight headwind for his failure to achieve his life's goal—300 miles per hour, saying it robbed him of approximately 9 miles an hour.

Disappointed at Mark.

Despite the fact that today's efforts lifted his mark 23.058 miles an hour, the little Briton was bitterly disappointed.

"Well, I've got to do it all over again," he said dejectedly when A. A. A. timers informed him that he had missed by a few thousandths of a second. "I'll go again in the morning if the ol' girl is ready, and I think she will be. There is probably no more disappointed man today than I am. It means nothing that my car did 304 miles an hour one way. I missed my goal and will keep right on trying until I get it."

Campbell, a man absolutely without nerves, was cold as ice at the finish of the first run which produced the blow-out when he was traveling at 300. He calmly puffed a cigarette as he told of the accident and of rolling to a stop on the rim.

"The car swerved a bit, yes, but it really wasn't bad. I managed to bring it to a stop without undue effort. No, no, no, certainly I wasn't afraid. One doesn't have time to grow alarmed at such a time."

Sir Malcolm revealed that in the last half of the measured mile on the second run, he was driving blind. Flying salt and steam poured

Vidal Reports Post Airplane Out of Balance

Carburetor Ice or Shifting Weight Is Blamed for Fatal Crash.

An intimation that the airplane crash that took the lives of Wiley Post and Will Rogers was caused by a nose-heavy airplane, or possibly by the formation of ice in the carburetor, was contained in a memorandum sent by Eugene L. Vidal, director of air commerce, to Secretary Roper last Friday, it was stated at the Department of Commerce yesterday.

In making the report, Vidal summarized all the information available in regard to the accident which occurred near Point Barrow, August 15. He flew to the west coast to interview Joe Crosson, veteran Arctic pilot who brought the bodies back to this country, and while there checked with commerce inspectors the original licensing of the ill-fated plane.

"Mr. Post substituted for his wheel landing gear a pair of pontoons at Seattle, and after being joined by Will Rogers, proceeded to Alaska from that point," Vidal wrote to Secretary Roper.

Plane Was Nose-Heavy.

"At Fairbanks, Alaska, Post informed Crosson, of Pan-American Airways, that the airplane had become nose-heavy on take-offs and landings following the installation of floats, and that on take-offs he had instructed Rogers to sit as far to the rear as possible and also to keep the equipment and the luggage well aft," the air commerce director continued.

"There can be only speculation as to the cause of the motor failure, the motor being buried in the mud underneath some two feet of water. We are inclined to believe that with the moisture in the air as it existed that day, and the temperature as it was reported, ice could have developed in the carburetor. Either that, or the spray from the water in taking off could have entered the scoops and in that way caused icing," Vidal's memorandum said.

The head of the Bureau of Air Commerce explained that details were obtained, "directly or indirectly," from an Eskimo who saw the plane fall; Sergt. Morgan, of the United States Army; a radio

League Test Over Africa Faced Today

Italy Set to Walk Out if Ethiopian Plans Are Denounced.

Geneva Council Faces Its Gravest Crisis; Prestige at Stake.

By the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 3.—The League of Nations tonight faced its most severe test since it was launched 15 years ago in a wave of post-war enthusiasm for collective peace guarantees.

Faced with Premier Benito Mussolini's insistent demand for colonial expansion in East Africa, the League must arrived at a formula which will preserve both peace—and the League.

It is difficult to conceive how the League can avoid crashing on one of the two rocks which beset its ourse.

If it takes a strong stand against Italian penetration of Ethiopia, Italy will walk out, joining Japan and Germany as a triumvirate of powers bound on achieving what they conceive to be their manifest destiny without international interference.

Loss of Prestige Faced.

If the council tolerates Italy's war preparations against Ethiopia, a League member, it sacrifices the respect of all and forever loses significance as an instrument of peace.

Most diplomats believe Mussolini will force the League to a decision by acting before the council can arrive at a formula. The East African rainy season ends officially late this month and it is believed Italian troops will be marching across the steaming lowlands toward the Ethiopian plateau soon after the rain has ceased falling.

League officials announced tonight that public discussions of the Italo-Ethiopian probelm would begin tomorrow. The council met privately at 4 p. m. and agreed upon the previously announced agenda for its eighty-eighth session. The vital question was listed as "the dispute between Ethiopia and Italy, at the request of the Ethiopian government."

Assembly May Get Appeal.

There is a possibility if the council fails to indicate determination to act courageously, Ethiopia may lay its case before the assembly meeting September 9. Similar action was taken by China in the Manchurian dispute with Japan and by Bolivia in the Gran Chaco conflict.

Purpose of such an appeal would be to take the quarrel out of the hands of the big powers who dominate the council and gain the support of small nations who are the bulk of the assembly.

Such a course would be certain to win loud vocal support of Ethiopia, since many of the small nations regard the present crisis as a test of the League's ability to keep its promise to keep their boundaries inviolate.

The powerful significance of this

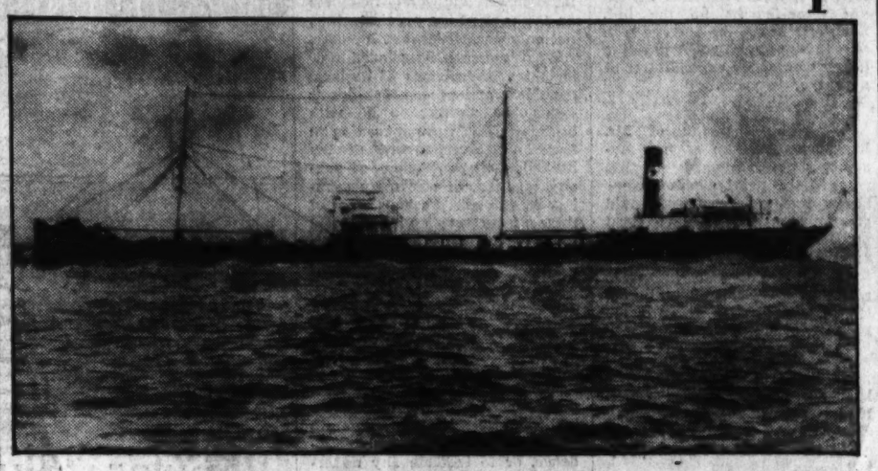
Liner on Reef Says 'All's Well' As Sea Balks 4 Rescue Ships



The tanker, Reaper, yesterday was standing abeam of the hurricane-swept S. S. Dixie, grounded on a Florida reef with 372 persons aboard.

Attempt to Transfer 372 Trapped on Dixie Held Likely Today.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 3.—Stuck fast on French Reef, 60 miles south of Miami, the Morgan liner Dixie was pounded by mountainous waves tonight while four rescue vessels stood helplessly by awaiting calmer seas to remove her 372 passengers and crew.

Capt. E. W. Sundstrom of the battered liner wirelessed late today "All is well." His message read: "Wind is now hauling to south and west, but still too rough to transfer passengers. Four ships standing by. All is well."

The four vessels which managed to locate the Dixie through blinding rain and fog in treacherous shoal waters were the Morgan liner El Occidente, the United Fruit liners Limon and Platano and the tanker Reaper.

The Dixie, driven by hurricane winds en route north up the Florida coast from New Orleans to New York, rammed the coral reef shortly after last midnight. Fragmentary reports by wireless indicated several of the passengers and crew had suffered minor injuries.

(Officials of the Morgan line in New Orleans announced a total of 372 persons was aboard the Dixie, including 241 passengers and 131 members of the crew, 13 of them officers.)

The passengers, many on vocation, came from all parts of the country, but 106 were from the New York City area. A number were from New Orleans and other Gulf cities.

A message received this afternoon, purportedly from Capt. Sundstrom, saying the ship was free from the reef, could not be confirmed by Morgan Line officials. Latest advices from Florida indicated the Dixie was still fast on French Reef.

The captain's "all is well" message was received with joy at the Morgan Line offices in New York, where relatives of passengers and

4 Shot, Dozens Hurt as Tampa Voters Defy Troops in Rioting

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 3.—Sporadic rioting between workers for city and county political factions left four men wounded and dozens suffering bruised heads as citizens nominated a mayor and election board members today.

Despite efforts of National guardsmen, ordered out by Gov. Dave Sholtz to prevent disorders, three city firemen and a special policeman were shot in clashes at the polls.

The bitter mayoral campaign saw the incumbent, R. E. L. Chancey, seeking a second term over B. D. McKay, who four times previously held the office. Chancey had the support of the city election machine, while the county organization favored McKay.

Both factions hired hundreds of election "watchers" and armed them with guns and clubs. The clashes began early in the day and broke out spasmodically.

Dozens of arrests were made by the special and regular officers representing the embattled organizations. City authorities took county supporters into custody and vice versa.

Many persons were treated at hospitals for clubbed heads as representatives of the two machines fought for control of precincts.

In a clash between city officers and special deputies at one polling place, City Firemen J. T. Creel and P. D. Shirley were wounded. Shortly thereafter Fireman Jimmie White and Special Officer J. B. Benjamin were shot. None was wounded seriously.

As the rioting began, the troops, armed with machine guns, tear gas, pistols, rifles and fixed bayonets, deployed among the city's 29 precincts.

When it became apparent there would be little trouble at voting booths patroled by the Guardsmen, the troops moved by truck to the scenes of rioting, but were unable to check demonstrations to any great extent.

The principal bone of contention in the bitter campaign between Chancey and McKay was a recent law making the Tampa election board an elective organization instead of a self-perpetuating one.

Plot to Wreck Flier Charged; 4 Men Seized

Quartet Taken at Maryland 'Jungle'; Crossties Piled in 'Diplomat's' Path.

Four men were being held in the Rockville, Md., jail last night in connection with what police said was a plot to wreck the Diplomat, crack B. & O. train plying between Washington and Detroit.

A dozen railroad ties were found piled athwart the B. & O. tracks outside of Silver Spring just before the flier was to pass at 5 p. m. Monday, police said.

The four men arrested near the scene are Martin Kelley, Uniontown, Pa.; James Nevin, of New York City, and Frank Barbour and Walter Hensley, of the District of Columbia.

They were arrested near a tramps' "jungle" on the outskirts of Silver Spring at the instance of an investigator for the B. & O. They were taken to Rockville Jail and held for the railroad company. No charges have been placed against them.

Rockville police could give no details of the alleged plot beyond saying that the railroad ties were discovered on the tracks just before the Diplomat came along. They assumed that they were found by a track walker.

The Diplomat, it was said, was flagged by somebody before it reached that point of the track where the obsctructive ties were found.

Score of Aged Faint In Rush for Pensions

Kansas City, Sept. 3 (AP).—More than 1,000 aged persons, a score of whom fainted, rushed the Jackson County (Kansas City) Courthouse today to apply for pensions under Missouri's old-age pension law. It was the opening day for the applications.

Half of the fund for the pensions is being derived from a sales tax, collected through the use of mills stamped on "milk bottle cap" cardboard discs.

Theft Reveals $10,000 Gold Found by Boys

Second Strike in Baltimore Cellar Bared in Trunk Looting of $8,100.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 3.—Good fortune and adversity conflicted today in the manner of a story book romance for two once penniless youths who unearthed a golden treasure from a musty cellar.

The theft of $5,000 in gold and $3,100 in currency from the home of one led to the revelation the boys had found a second treasure trove, valued at $10,000.

The two lads, Theodore Jones and Henry Grob, had their first taste of wealth about a year ago when they unearthed several thousand gold coins from the dank cellar floor beneath Jones' residence.

It was only after extended litigation that they won the right to keep the gold. The coins were sold at auction last August for $20,000.

The boys did not reveal their secon find of $10,000 until today, when police began investigating the robbery at the apartment where Theodore Jones lived with his mother and step-father, Philip A. Rummel.

Savings Hidden in Trunk.

The $5,000 of gold and the $3,100 in currency that constituted his life savings were stolen from a trunk in the second-floor rear apartment last night, Rummell told police.

When officers began inquiring into the presence of the gold in the house, Theodore and Henry told Lieut. Ezekiel Williams they decided a month ago to dig in the cellar floor again.

"I was holding the pick when it hit a can," Theodore said. "We opened it and there was gold money in it. We took it upstairs and divided it."

Asked how the division was made, Theodore said:

"Well, we just took one $20 gold piece for him and then one for me, and then one for him and then one

47 Are Hurt As Gale Hits Florida Camp For Veterans

Toll of 200 Reported Likely; West Coast of State Menaced.

Train Bearing 650 From Zone Trapped

Town Whipped by 100-Mi. Wind Lacks Medicine, Food, Water.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 3.—Heavy loss of life in the sparsely settled Florida keys was feared tonight as first reports over broken communication lines came from the section struck by a tropical hurricane which still held a threat for the west coast of Florida.

An unconfirmed report to The Miami Daily News from its staff photographer, Ralph Willits, in the keys section, said 78 persons, of whom 75 were war veterans, were killed in the destruction of the little town of Tavernier early today.

Willits reported that two veterans, members of Veterans' Camp No. 1, shouted the news to him across a stretch of open water where a bridge was washed out.

Four other Miami men, Ralph White, Allen Mills, R. D. Betikofer and J. L. Johnson, returned from Tavernier tonight to confirm Willits' story.

They said they walked out a small promontory to get as near to the two veterans as they could.

The men, obviously exhausted and ill, shouted and made signs to make them understand 75 members of the camp had been killed and 47 injured in the storm. Four doctors in the camp were killed about 10 p. m. the night before, the Miami men said they understood.

Meanwhile, a radio report to the Coast Guard at Jacksonville also reported 75 dead and 47 injured. It said there were no supplies of any kind at the Veterans Relief Camp No. 1 on Rock Harbor, Florida Keys.

Radio Confirms Toll.

The radio message to divisional headquarters here from the air station at Miami said:

"Seventy-five dead, 47 injured, 4 doctors killed, no medical aid, no food or water, no medical supplies or clothing. Request immediate medical aid, water and supplies. No communications on Islamora or Matacumbe."

The message was received here at 6 p. m. (E. S. T.).

The Coast Guard said Rock Harbor is about 6 miles west of French Reef, where the Morgan liner, Dixie, is aground.

Mayor Preston Bird of Homestead also telephoned that three citizens of Tavernier were killed. He said he was a member of the searching party which recovered the bodies.

A special train sent down into the keys to evacuate 650 war veterans engaged in building an oversea highway was reported by Coast Guard headquarters to be marooned on Snake Creek, about 70 miles south of Miami.

The report from the Fort Lauderdale Coast Guard headquarters did not say whether all 650 of the veterans were aboard or whether there had been any casualties.

The storm at 5 p. m. (E. S. T.) was reported by the Weather Bureau to be centralized a short distance off Punta Gorda, where an earlier advisory had said winds of 70 miles an hour velocity might be expected tonight.

Farther north, at Tampa, winds of 50 to 60 miles an hour were forecast.

The hurricane, which drove the Morgan liner Dixie onto a reef during the night and cut a destructive path across the Keys and the southern tip of the peninsula was moving northwestward or north northwestward through the Gulf of Mexico early tonight.

"Worse Than 1926."

One report from the keys area described the storm there as worse than the 1926 hurricane.

In addition to Tavernier, the island town of Whale Harbor in the keys also was reported flattened by the storm as it raged northwestward onto the mainland, cut across the vast but thinly settled Everglades and entered the Gulf of Mexico near Everglades City.

The Miami news story quoted observers as saying they believed the death toll, when all reports were received from the scattered settlements dotting the thinly populated area, would reach several hundred.

U. S. Interests Set to Cancel Oil Concessions

Standard Oil Subsidiary's Officials Give Pledge to Hull Here.

the announcement that the agreement would be cancelled at 6 p. m. Thus, in a little more than six hours after the State Department learned the identity of persons making the contract, arrangements had been made for its cancellation.

The conversations and agreement were entirely informal, thus allowing Hull to terminate what he himself termed an "embarrassing" situation, without involving the United States in any way in the Ethiopian controversy.

Deal's Background Given.

Shortly after announcement of the agreement between Selassie and the American company was announced, Great Britain demanded of the Ethiopian Emperor that he cancel the arrangement. He flatly refused to do so.

In connection with the State Department announcement, Walden issued a statement in which he cleared up details of the transaction. He said that for more than 20 years his company had been engaged in the oil business in Ethiopia and that it is interested in petroleum production in that country, as well as in other countries in which it does business.

"Early this year," he said, "Mr. Francis W. Rickett of London approached us on the possibilities of negotiating on our behalf a petroleum exploration and development agreement with the Kingdom of Ethiopia. After considerable discussion with Mr. Rickett it seemed probable that he migh be able to secure a concession, whereupon the Standard Vacuum Oil Co. organized a corporation in Delaware known as the African Exploration and Development Corporation as a wholly-owned subsidiary to acquire such concession when granted."

Walden said he had been informed last Frida ythat such an agreement had been signed with the emperor, although he said he had not seen a copy of the agreement.

No Money Involved.

"The agreement which Mr. Ricketts was authorized to negotiate," he said, "relates to the development of crude petroleum production and provides no payment or loan of money nor has any been made.

"The agreement calls for a geological survey within one year. If this survey indicates the presence of petroleum in such quantities that the African Exploration and Development Corporation should desire to continue to hold the concession, then it must begin drilling in five years. Thereafter, in event petroleum is discovered in commercial quantities, the operation of the properties is to be in accordance with customary development practice.

"Ethiopia then would receive a royalty on all petroleum produced."

Deal Handled Privately.

Walden declared that the transaction had been handled as a matter of private business without consultation with any government.

Walden said that in view of "misleading statements" concerning the transaction he had decided to explain it in detail to the State Department.

"Today I have done this," he concluded, "and after conference with the Secretary of State have decided to advise the Ethiopian government of our intention to abandon the concession."

Announcement last Friday night by Rickett that the deal with the Ethiopian emperor had been closed came as a bombshell in the Itaian-Ethiopian controversy. The arrangement appeared to be far-reaching in its impications. It was understood at first that both British and American capital was involved. The situation became more confusing when officials of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey denied any knowledge of the deal.

League Faces Test On Africa Today

point becomes apparent when it is realized that the League since end of the World War has stood as guarantor of the status quo in Europe, preserving the multitude of small countries hacked out of the old pre-war nations by the peacemakers of Versailles. With German and Austrian military power resurgent and talk of reuniting Austria and Hungary under a Hapsburg monarch already common in Central European chancellories, the little post-war countries have real cause to watch the League's conduct in protecting Ethiopia.

Eden to Report Failure.

First public session of the council tomorrow is expected to be devoted to:

1. A report by Capt. Anthony Eden of Great Britain and Premier Pierre Laval of France on failure of the three-power conference in Paris to settle the Italo-Ethiopian dispute under the 1906 treaty.

2. A report of the council's five-man arbitration board, confessing inability to determine responsibility for the Ualual frontier clash between Italian native troops and Ethiopians.

Subsequent public sessions are to hear Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Mussolini's diplomatic mouthpiece, deliver his address charging Ethiopia is unfit for League membership, and the reply of Gaston Jeze, French legal advisor to Emperor Haile Selassie.

Aloisi is expected to warn the council in effect: "Choose between Italy and savage, slave-trading Ethiopia." He arrived here from Rome today bolstered with a long statement of claims against the Ethiopians. He is expected to reach back 50 years into history to substantiate his claim that the East African empire is unfit to enjoy the association with "civilized" powers.

Jeze will demand the League act before Italy attacks.

While the council publicly discusses 30 other matters on its agenda, negotiations will be opened among Britain, France, Italy and Ethiopia in an effort once more to locate in old-fashioned around-the-table diplomacy a way out of the morass, satisfying Italy, rescuing Ethiopia and preserving the League's prestige.

Between You and Me

Roosevelt's Troubles Bred by Deficit, Relief; Business Hungers for Friendly Gesture.

By Raymond Clapper

MANY of President Roosevelt's political troubles would evaporate if he should succeed next winter in pulling Government expenses down within hailing distance of income. Much of the current complaint against him is traceable directly or indirectly to this excess of spending.

For every dollar collected in taxes, the Government is spending $2. At the moment, expenses are running more than double receipts. There is little sign of any narrowing of the spread between income and outgo. That is what causes concern. It colors the average man's judgment of many other things that Mr. Roosevelt does. It tends to put the public in a thumbs-down attitude.

Everyone knows this excess of spending can not go on forever. Sentiment is jelling in the conviction that this a good time to begin drawing in the belt sharply, because so many lines of business are returning toward normal. The New York Times general index is close to 90 per cent of normal. Power consumption is 107 per cent of normal and other factors are three-fourths up the hill. Such conditions, the average man says to himself, do not require the heavy emergency expenditures of a year or two ago.

A striking paradox of Mr. Roosevelt's position at the moment is that, although he has reached the point where further strong business recovery would greatly ease this central fiscal problem, he is seemingly more antagonistic toward business than ever. The play in recent weeks has been strongly to the left wingers at the expense of the business community.

Mr. Roosevelt's two main problems are the deficit and relief. If he solves them everything else will be easy. Most of his other troubles will automatically roll away.

Expanded business activity offers the best bet now. Instead of striking a menacing pose, which enables his political opponents to say that he is retarding rather than facilitating recovery, Mr. Roosevelt could adopt a friendly attitude, place less emphasis on the doctor's prescription from Washington and more on encouraging natural recuperative forces, and if this guess is worth anything at all, there would be a quick easing of the tension which keeps the Administration and the business life of the country pulling at cross purposes.

And there's gold in them thar hills for the Treasury. Last year, revenues increased 22 per cent, largely due to increased business activity. Another jump of similar proportions would—if Mr. Roosevelt at the same time cut his relief cost down to say not more than $1,000,000,000—bring the budget close to balance, not counting, of course, money paid toward retiring the public debt.

The answer to increased revenues now is not increased taxes, but increased business. With that, and a sharp tightening up of relief expenses, which are on far too loose and extravagant basis for the near-normal times which seem to be approaching, the fiscal side of the Administration's difficulties would be in the way to real solution. Then much of the talk about broken promises would become hollow.

That business is ready for such a forward leap is evident on every hand. There never was so much idle capital, available dirt cheap, nor such a reservoir of unfilled wants. This year's phenomenal burst of travel, the crowded vacation resorts everywhere, is indicative of ability and readiness on the part of the public to buy, not only necessities, but luxuries.

What seems most needed now is that apprehensions of business men, fear of further crack-downs—this has nothing to do with Secretary Hull's prompt action in forcing abandonment of the Ethiopian oil concession—of penalty taxation, of still more curbing, be quieted. Perhaps some of these fears are without real foundation. Many of them arise from a feeling that Washington is inclined to be hostile, that there is a lack of sympathy, that the business community is to be tolerated as a necessary evil, to be eyed suspiciously. Business men exaggerate such antagonism as exists. While many of their suspicions may be unjustified, there is little effort in Washington to reassure them, to win their confidence, or to indicate any underlying sympathy.

Once this situation were cleared—and so much of it is temperamental on both sides and so readily amenable to a touch of mutual friendliness that it is a tragic loss for such tension to continue—the chances are all in favor of our going over the top quite soon.

The relief problem is not so easy. Recovery to date, marked as it has been, has scarcely dented the unemployment rolls. Further recovery no doubt would cut into them considerably, however, for on the next spurt probably the luxury and semiluxury goods will show the most marked advance. These are consumer industries and are proportionately heavy users of labor, so further business recovery would likely mean a reduction of the number that must be cared for on relief. It would mean better State and local revenues and an opportunity to shift a greater proportion of the burden back off of the Federal Government. And if with it all there was a tightening of the Federal relief organization, which is still run on a loose, extravagant basis, considerably colored by the spending, pump-priming theory—well, the Republicans are just hoping that Mr. Roosevelt won't ruin them by letting these two things happen.

* * *

The Government is doing everything possible to protect American citizens from the horrors of another war. But we still have our automobiles.

Rescue of 372 on Dixie Off Florida Coast, Is Likely Today.

crew had besieged officials for word of their rescue. United Fruit's Tropical Radio, Radiomarine Corporation and Mackay Radio cooperated all day to keep communication.

The Dixie's radio apparatus was disabled for several hours and an emergency set sent weak messages. Later Tropical Radio reported her radio was repaired and she was in communication with the rescue vessels standing by.

The weather was moderating tonight and nearly a dozen other vessels were headed in the Dixie's direction to offer aid should it be required.

Unless more serious complications are incurred it appeared unlikely rescue efforts would be undertaken before tomorrow morning. The Dixie reported early today she was taking "some water in double bottom tanks." How badly she was damaged was not determined.

Seas Block Rescue.

The Limon sighted the Dixie shortly after noon, a message to Tropical Radio said, but was blocked by the rough weather from beginning rescue operations.

"The captain sees you okay," the Dixie told the Limon, "but can't transfer passengers now. It's too rough."

To which the Limon replied:

"Will be standing by with boats ready."

Tropical radio issued the following dispatch in New Orleans late today:

"The situation remains unchanged. Steamers Reaper and Limon standing by waiting weather moderation. Platano Hove to off Carysfort. Same reason (waiting for weather to clear). Dixie's radio equipment performing O. K. and we communicating with her."

The Dixie first gave her position as on dangerous Carysfort reef, whose sharp coral shafts almost annually claim various types of craft, but after a re-check it was determined she was grounded on French reef, 8 miles farther South.

The Miami Coast Guard station advised it would be impossible to send a seaplane to the scene until the weather improves.

The message did not say a coast guard plane would go when the winds die down, but merely reported inability to get a plane in the air at this time.

Among Passengers.

Among passengers aboard the Dixie are Leland D. Ranson, of Westfield, N. J., assistant manager of the Morgan Steamship Lines, operators of the ship, and his wife and two sons; Dr. Sander Lorand, New York psychiatrist and his wife who are returning from a California vacation; Pauline Humeston, secretary to the chairman of the board of the New York publishing firm of Harper & Bros., and Fannie Jacobs, head of a New York hotel supply company.

Other passengers included Mrs. C. Jeff Miller and Miss Elizabeth Miller, of New Orleans, wife and daughter of the former president of the American College of Surgeons. Also from the South are Dr. and Mrs. Oswald E. Denny, of Carville, La., and their sons, Robert and Philip. Dr. Denny is a surgeon in the United States Public Health Service, with the rank of a major, and is considered an outstanding leprosy specialist.

The chief radio operator on the Dixie is 35-year-old James W. Hodges, son of Charles H. Hodges, retired Kansas City, Mo., business man.

While their son worked long hours sending out cryptic messages from the storm-lashed vessel, Mr. and Mrs. Hodges listened anxiously at home for news as to the fate of all aboard. The son was compelled to use an emergency radio set after the ship's regular wireless apparatus was disabled by the storm.

Young Hodges first became interested in wireless when a clerk in a Kansas City drug store, selling tubes and other gadgets over the counter.

May Test New Law.

The vessel may be the first to be affected by the provisions of the new Sirovich limited liability act, which President Roosevelt signed into effect Friday. It is designed to aid in the protection of life at sea by fixing the liability of a steamship concern in the event of an accident.

The bill provides primary liability shall be $60 a ton on the tonnage, plus freight charges and passenger fares. Those familiar with the measure said, however, that passengers on the Dixie would have a case only in the event the Steamship Inspection Service rules that the ship's master was negligent.

Meantime, steaming to the scene, were the United States cutters Carrabasset and Saukee, the tanker Watertown, the Agwistar, the steamship King and El Occidente, the latter also owned by the Morgan line.

The Limon was the first to reach the Dixie, but dared not advance close enough to the trapped vessel to attempt to remove the passengers because of the treacherous shoals and the heavy seas.

It was probable the Government cutter Carrabasset would venture as close as possible when the seas subside and try to take off the passengers by breeches buoy.

This is a particularly dangerous undertaking, however, and may not be resorted to if there are signs of the Dixie withstanding the pounding of the shark-infested seas.

With visibility virtually nil, the vessels that plowed to the Dixie's rescue were compelled at first to depend almost entirely upon garbled messages from the stranded liner for guidance. They set their courses for Carysfort Reef, but later groped their way southward through the dangerous shoals after it finally was determined the Morgan liner was grounded on French Reef, 60 miles south of Miami.

British Speedster Coated With Salt in Dash

Sir Malcolm Campbell draws to a stop after smashing the world's record at 299.874 miles per hour, and hitting as high as 304 miles during his run in the salt beds of Utah yesterday.

the Tavernier area reported 30 of the approximately 50 houses in that little town were demolished by the blow.

They expressed belief the center of the storm hit directly at Tavernier, and quoted residents who had lived there 40 years as saying the wind velocity got well above 100 miles an hour.

Two food trucks carrying bread, eggs, milk and other staples left for the Tavernier area this afternoon.

Three doctors left at the same time.

R. B. Eavenson and Ray Mills, deputy sheriffs sent to Tavernier to investigate, returned with reports that conditions were grave there. Many were injured, they said.

Reports directly to the Associated Press made no mention of any casualties in the Tavernier area, although the storm was described as the worst in years.

Residents of the Keys were said to be in dire need of medicines and other necessities, since homes and all their property were gone.

Water Pours In.

A Miami newspaperman and photographer returned today from the storm-lashed keys to tell how last night's and today's great winds sent solid walls of water pouring over the Overseas highway leading to Key West.

Ted Ramsay, the newspaperman, and Charles C. Ebbetts, the photographer, said the onrushing water almost trapped them as they pushed their way by automobile into the heart of the hurricane area.

All along the highway south of Homestead, Ramsay said, houses were flattened like eggshells. Thirty of the 50 homes in the little town of Tavernier were virtually demolished, he related, while residences along the route were picked up bodily by the winds and lifted to the other side.

It was shortly below Tavernier, at Snake Creek, that the break in the Florida East Coast Railway line—which marooned an 11-car special train bringing 650 encamped war veterans out of the danger zone—occurred, he said. At one place the rushing waters lifted up an estimated mile of track and placed it over the track's width, Ramsay said.

A traveler into the storm area who got far enough to see the marooned train said everything, from his distance, appeared all right.

Florida East Coast officials said it was possible the repair crew sent down the line after the marooned train would have the Snake Creek gap closed tomorrow morning.

If not, it was understood Coast Guard officials were considering flying food and medical supplies to the train.

Six Projects Approved.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lonaconing, Md., Sept. 3.—The Mayor and city council, at a special meeting, approved six projects to be submitted under the WPA, calling for the surfacing of streets, including Gills Hill, Robin street, East Railroad street, Castle Hill, Dudley and Church street extended.

into the cockpit, blinding and choking him.

"I had tremendous difficulty in seeing my way down the track. The flying salt created an opaque screen in front of the car. It was similar to a London fog."

The little Britisher also revealed that he was forced to start the second run half a mile short of the beginning of the runway. This was because he was pressed for time. Most of the hour allotted him by the A. A. A. to make the runs was used in changing six tires, checking the motor, refueling, and repairing a tear in the body.

Among the crowd watching the British daredevil on his run was Campbell's 15-year-old son, Donald.

Carburetor Ice May Have Caused Motor Trouble, Vidal Reports.

report from Inspector Hall, of the Bureau of Air Commerce, located in Alaska, and from other sources.

Not Careless Flier.

Concerning the plan to fly the plane in Alaska, Vidal said, "Post remarked that in their flying about Alaska, under no circumstances would he fly with Rogers in or above any cloud or fog bank.

"His plan was to travel as safely as possible by so-called 'contact flying,' turning back and landing in lakes or rivers when the weather made it dangerous to proceed. It was because of this attitude or policy that their reported indifference to weather reports could not be considered as careless.

"Pan American Airways base personnel at Fairbanks checked the plane and the motor and declared 'everything in good order' with the exception that a generator failure eliminated self-starting the motor, thus making it necessary to start the motor by hand."

Fell 200 Feet.

The Vidal memorandum dismissed rumors that Post was experiencing motor trouble before the takeoff which resulted in the accident.

"He would not have attempted to take off from the lagoon with Rogers as a passenger if both the plane and the motor were not functioning properly. Post probably looked over his plane from the pontoons before the motor was started by hand."

Vidal also stated that "while the Eskimo reported that the plane had risen about 50 feet, it seems quite apparent that Post had climbed to a higher altitude, probably almost 200 feet, which was the lower level of the fog bank.

"The near perpendicular nosing-in of the plane and its turning over on its back would indicate that an altitude higher than 50 feet had been gained prior to its stalling."

for me until all the $20 pieces were gone. Then we did the same with the $10 gold pieces."

Theodore said he gave his share to his mother, Mrs. Rummel, who put it in the trunk with her husband's savings.

But Henry Grob's mother took his share downtown and sold it for $3,400.

"She took a beating," Henry said. "It was worth $5,000 I'm sure."

Rummel told police a window leading into the apartment from a fire escape was forced last night. He found the apartment ransacked and the money gone, he said.

"All three of us went out at 7:30 to see a lawyer about drawing up a deed for a house in Overlea we are buying," Mrs. Rummel said. She married Rummel last month.

"We came back a little after 10:30. We found a window open and the whole apartment ransacked.

"Mrs. Rummel and I counted his money Saturday, and then he put it away in a cupboard. I felt that the cupboard wasn't safe enough, so I put it in the trunk with the gold.

"Theodore found the gold by himself after the first money had been turned over to the police. We were advised to keep it and say nothing about it."

Terre Haute and Broadway Crowing About Legitimate Bookings as Capital Waits

Potential Hits Numerous on New York List

Posey for Ginger Rogers; 'Romeo and Juliet' and Edgar Guest.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross,

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

Allentown, Pa., and Terra Haute, Ind., are preparing to receive Ethel Barrymore in "The Constant Wife," but the legitimate is still dark in the Nation's Capital, as the Board of Trade identifies Washington, District of Columbia.

New York won't be long in seeing several dozen plays and musicals which, at least on paper, look sure-fire hits, but the E street National's front is plastered with nothing more engaging than an announcement about a free lecture.

Not only will Allentown and Terre Haute be favored with the regal presence of Dame Ethel this fall and winter in the same revival which Washington saw last spring, but also East Liverpool, Marion and Springfield, in Ohio; Paducah and Hopkinsville, Ky.; Shreveport, La.; Columbia, S. C., and any number of other 9 o'clock hamlets, some of which haven't been host to flesh-and-blood drama since Serajevo.

Cochran a Busy Man.

Following in the footsteps of Katharine Cornell, Eva LeGallienne and other top-notchers who haven't lost faith in the road, Miss Barrymore and "The Constant Wife" will support each other from coast to coast. Rehearsals begin September 23, and the whole venture is under sponsorship of Washington's Stephen E. Cochran.

Inquiries and bookings have been fairly pouring into Mr. Cochran's New York hotel suite ever since word came out that Miss Barrymore was going to head for the tall grass. She will open in Princeton, N. J., on October 7.

Meanwhile Broadway, less worshipful of the name of Barrymore than Keokuk, is anxiously awaiting "Jumbo," "Pride and Prejudice" (dramatization of Jane Austen's novel in which Lillian and Dorothy Gish may be reunited), "Saratoga Chips," "Jubilee," the Shuberts' "At Home Abroad" a new "Ziegfeld Follies," Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina" and a treasury of other attractions.

To Suit Every Taste.

Something like a score of productions already are in rehearsal for the new season, which promises to be the most opulent since the Crash. Theater Guild's first will be an anti-war drama by John Haynes Holmes and Reginald Lawrence entitled "If This Be Treason." "Porgy and Bess," based upon the unforgettable "Porgy," is scheduled to be sung and acted October 15.

"Jubilee" will hit Broadway on October 5 after a Boston try-out. "First Lady," George Kaufman's and Katherine Dayton's satire on society in the Nation's Capital, will follow a month later. Irving Berlin is writing music for another "Music Box Revue" and Guthrie McClintic will produce Maxwell Anderson's new play, "The Bridge."

We could go on like this for 30 or 40 more titles, even longer, but only at the risk of being consumed by jealousy.

In Retrospect.

Witnessing "Smilin' Through" at the Columbia last Saturday night for the first time, having missed this memorable picture when it was released three years ago, we were impressed most by Norma Shearer. If her forthcoming "Juliet" is as convincing as her 1932 model "Kathleen," a fair comparison, it will be magnificent.

The years have dealt kindly with the Cowl-Murfin story of two unfortunate couples. Sentimental but not slobbery, it is built to stand repetition in 1935 and, we dare say, 1940. Watching the characters being etched by Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, Frederic March and O. P. Heggie, we readily understand why there was such great popular demand for revival of "Smilin' Through."

For, after all, there is something chastening and fine about a good cry.

Second scanning of this column's observations on "Top Hat" reveal the inexcusable fact that they do not give Miss Ginger Rogers her just deserts. In a nutshell, then (though she looks ever so much better in that feathery gown worn in the "Cheek to Cheek" number), Miss Rogers is A No. 1 and even Fred Astaire's bewitched feet can't conceal her screen virtues.

In "Top Hat" she proves all over that she is an actress of parts (preferably musical comedy) and that she is an expert dancer. It is too bad they didn't give her anything to sing besides "Piccolino," for her voice is nothing to be hushed.

Hugh Herbert is almost as funny in retrospect as he is when performing such nonsense in "We're in the Money."

Movie miscellany: Lillian Hellman, who wrote "The Children's Hour" and co-authored the picture, "The Dark Angel," which opens in New York Thursday, is in New York from Hollywood to attend the premiere . . . Paul Muni is back in the First National studios, after being laid up with yellow jaundice, to begin work on "Enemy of Man" . . . Scheduled to attend that "Dark Angel" premiere are Frederic March and Merle Oberon, the stars; Grace Moore, Wallace Beery, Bela Lugosi, Luigi Perandello, Eleanor Powell and Mae Murray . . . that ought to make it gala . . . Marta Eggerth disembarked in New York yesterday and will star soon in "Song of Joy" . . . Evelyn Venable's new contract with Republic Pictures forbids her to fly for two years . . . Charles Chaplin's "Modern Times" will have a fancy opening in New York October 11 . . . It is his first show in four years . . .

Irish and Old Nick Continue

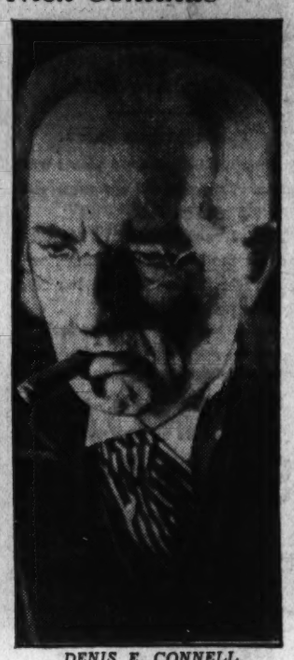
who is the "fireman extraordinary" in "The Irish in Us," at the Metropolitan, dividing bouquets with James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Olivia de Havilland.



DENIS E. CONNELL,

as he appears as Nicholas Van Alstyne in "The Henrietta," latest production of the Roadside Players, which last night embarked upon its second week.

Archibald Grosvenor he will read lines, sing and dance.

Local boy making good: William Phillips, the Roadside Theater's ranking comedian, left for New York Sunday at the request of a prominent Broadway producer for whom he has worked in the past, according to a late announcement reaching this desk. He is the chap who starred in Western High School and George Washington University theatricals and played the front legs of the White Knight's horse in Eva LeGallienne's road company of "Alice in Wonderland." This summer he has been with the Roadsiders. Should he not be needed for New York rehearsals before September 14, he will return here in his old role of Jerry in "To Die at Dawn," which his Rockville pike confreres have scheduled in a repeat engagement to follow "The Henrietta" and wind up their season.

Tennyson and Guest.

How the movies are falling back on the world's great poets, in one way or another! A picture to be released soon will seal the immortality of Alfred Lord Tennyson's poem on the Light Brigade, and now Edgar A. Guest is going to star in Universal pictures.

The newspaper rhymester, whom you swear by or swear at, passed his screen tests in Chicago last week and by this time he is all set not only to act, but also to write dialog for Carl Laemmle. His first role will be as the principal character in a homey drama based on one of his own verses, "Home."

"I look upon Mr. Guest," admitted Mr. Laemmle, "as one of the great screen stars of tomorrow. He is the personification of modern American wit, vision and understanding. He knows American minds, hearts and homes and I know of no man better qualified to present the philosophy of the home builder, on the screen."

Loew's Fox will have a singing musician in its orchestra pit beginning Friday, and Conductor Phil Lampkin will give him plenty of chances to show off his voice, as well as his guitar, banjo, saxophone and violin playing.

The innovation is named Lew Davies. Along with Charles Manning, he will be added to Maestro Lampkin's aggregation. Mr. Manning simply plays the oboe and harp. Both are Washingtonians.

It's been more than six centuries since Dante wrote "The Divine Comedy," whose "Inferno" portion accounts for next week's screen feature at Loew's Fox, but Art Jarrett became leader of the band which he is bringing Friday to the same theater only a year ago. Just imagine.

Carter Barron says that "China Seas," which supplants "Smilin' Through" at the Columbia Friday after a two weeks' run at the Palace, is rolling up record and near-record grosses in every city in his Loew's division. The divisional manager also is bragging about this week's business at the Palace, Fox and Columbia.

Over the Night Wires.

Late flashes from Fifteenth street and Hollywood.

Via Western Union:

"Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers Top Hat did it again stop As previously advised Top Hat broke every record Sunday and now comes along Monday and breaks that Sunday record Best regards Hardie."

Via the Associated Press:

Wynne Gibson, returning to the West Coast from Europe, advises David O. Selznick leaves New York for Hollywood today, his own production company definitely launched.

Amateurs and Semi-Pros.

The Roadside Players last night opened their second week in "The Henrietta," Bronson Howard's 4-act comedy concerning itself with high finances at the turn of the century. There will be a special bus to the picturesque barn theater on the Rockville Pike at 8 o'clock tonight, as is the custom on Tuesdays and Fridays. It leaves from Dupont Circle, in front of the Riggs branch bank.

Tomorrow night's performance in the National Press Club Auditorium will mark the opening of the Willard Player's fourth week in "East Lynne." A large group of the District of Columbia division, Young Democrats Society, will weep with the heroine and hiss the villain Friday night. Members wishing to buy tickets may telephone Miss Eleania Clifton at District 2200, branch 481, by day, or North 8624 by night.

William J. McLean will speak the prologue to "Romeo and Juliet," which the Bartfield Players will present at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds. Robert Duke was cast for this chore but his current role in "The Henrietta" conflicted. Also William Milton will play Paris, and not James M. Rawls. Virginia Amadon will be Lady Montague, replacing Yerby Pannill, who becomes the nurse because Mabel Owens Wilcox is out of town.

Richard Midgley, who is none other than the Archibald Carlyle of "East Lynne," keeps the euphonious front moniker but changes his last name to Grosvenor in "Patience," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta which the Washington Community Players are reviving in the Sylvan Theater next Monday night. As Hollywood's funny men that English studios could use their gags and antics. "The average movie-goer over there thinks American comedy is 'rather ripping,'" she says.

Thomas L. Talley, 74-year-old motion picture pioneer, claims invention of a camera which enables the operator to "shoot" in any and all directions.

The romance of Barton Hayes, 26, and Claire Myers, 18, is up in the air. He is a film technician, she an actress. They obtained a wedding license August 14, but "Claire didn't know she was signing an application for a license and had no plans whatsoever of marrying the man," her father said last night. "We are in love," countered Mr. Hayes. Miss Meyers, strangely enough for a woman, was silent.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN is Remembered at last!

Julius Kessler . . . Dean of Distillers . . . gives Bill Corum the inside story of a "New Deal" in Low-Priced Whiskies!

A SPORTS WRITER deals in thrills. Seeing them and recounting them is his business. But he must get the bang himself before he can make others feel it. I got one out of this interview with Julius Kessler, 80-year-old dean of distillers.

A Remarkable Man

Mr. Kessler is a remarkable man. He's made and sold more whiskies than any man in history. He probably knows more about whiskies than any other living man.

We talked about the honey days of the Gay Nineties, when eating and drinking were among the fine arts. Then Mr. Kessler gave me some spot news.

Here's the News:

After nearly two years of patient tasting and testing, Kessler has at last perfected a whiskey formula that gives smoothness—mellowness—palatability in a low-priced whiskey.

"I had in mind", said Kessler, "the man who was forgotten in the rush to market whiskey after repeal. It is this forgotten man that I have remembered."

Which is exactly what Julius Kessler has done. I tasted his whiskey. I could tell. He's putting a really fine drink of whiskey within the reach of everyman's pocketbook.

But how about you tasting them and seeing for yourself. Then you'll know. And this I know, the Forgotten Man has been remembered at last.

Yours for thrills,
Bill Corum

Mayflower Set To Give Lounge Autumn Touch

Heavy Rugs, Draperies to Be Moved In if Cool Spell Continues.

By Chanticleer.

The moving men at the Mayflower have their orders to stand by these cool days. We old Washingtonians know the weather may do a right-about-turn and burn us up again, but the propects right now smack of soft lights and smouldering logs in the old fireplace for September.

With this in mind, the Mayflower lounge is being prepared for those heavy rugs and luxurious draperies which mark it with a fall and winter touch. The one department not to be altered, however, is Buddy Harmon and his orchestra. Hot or cold—the customers do like to dance to Buddy's music.

• • • •

It is my understanding that Harmon's collection of titles of old popular tunes is to be typed most neatly ere long and put into book form . . . where the lounge cocktailers can look it over for favorites of yesterday.

The list of titles is well over a thousand now. And all you have to do is settle down with the book . . . select some old song which gives you a sentimental jab in the ribs . . . Buddy is ready to play it. And the Mayflower boasts pretzels, potato chips, salted nuts, mints and other tidbits while you listen.

• • • •

Our last romance broke up before it got started . . . but another is blossoming under the stars at the Club Habana (when the rain gives the stars a chance.) This one has to do with Jimmy ("I'll Never Say Never") Bright, vocalist extraordinaire of Moe Baer's Habana Roof Orchestra, and "The Countess." Now, you never heard of the Countess, but she's one of the charming little tap dancers in the "Going Native" line at the Lotus Restaurant this week . . . Virginia Howard, to you. The other night Al Elmer Norton, who mc's the Lotus floor shows, noted the Bright-Howard handholding and observed that "he may be dull at times but she's doing a nice job of making Jimmie Bright." Ho-hum.

• • • •

Speaking of the Lotus, a hand ought to be given once in a while to some of the routine things going on about the after-dark-centers. There's Bill Strickland's Capitolians for example. Maestro Strickland and his young men play three floor shows daily and hours of dancing for the dinner and supper crowds. Week in and week out a different array of artists appears for the floor shows . . . and all with different arrangement of songs . . . all with individual and ofttimes extreme ideas of how their act is to be presented. They do say that no act ever went out of the Lotus without the most having been given it by the orchestra and that automatically means the most given by the artists themselves. And yet the musician is termed temperamental.

• • • •

This is too good to pass up. A night or two ago a patron of the Hi-Hat at the Ambassador called Laura Fones, who vends nicotine there, to his table and asked where the new stringed instrumentalists were from. "They're Filipinos," says Laura very pertly . . . and then before the patron could thank her . . . "and they're from Philadelphia, too."

• • • •

Bernie Levy, like the much sung 'Annie, isn't at the Hangar Club any more. That is, he won't be for about five weeks. Having that airport right across the road has its advantages. Every few days some brass-hat from the flicker industry drops in to kill time between planes. One day Bernie and a prominent director got into a deep discussion of movies and night clubs and whatnot and it resulted in a fervent invitation of the movie baron to spend a vacation in Hollywood. So Bernie won't be at the Hangar Club for a few weeks. He'll be at Malibu Beach with his friend, the director, seeing how the movie wheels go round.

• • • •

The Mayfair Restaurant of All Nations introduces Duvall and Ross this week. Duvall (she's one personable young lady with only one name) plays the accordian and Lee Ross the violin. Both sing in seven or eight languages. It really presents a delightful opportunity to play a new version of the old game of requesting something you think musicians can't play or sing . . . because Duvall and Ross know 'em in several languages. They're old vaudevillians and came to Washington from Chicago.

• • • •

Milt Barrett says he would like veree, veree much to hold Parker Brothers and Lynn over next week but they have a vaudeville engagement. They're appearing this week at Host Barrett's Dude Ranch—two boys and a girl who execute some new and different movements identified as a "Persian Slave Dance." And hand balancing and eccentric numbers. In addition to Dolly Dare and Dic Bea, two Dude Ranch favorites, this week's floor show is brightened by Jimmy Staley, crooner of the air waves.

• • • •

These rainy evenings haven't fooled the Shoreham one bit. The entire Terrace, kit and kaboodle, moves into the spacious ballroom. Besides, the citizenry will be in the ballroom anyway in another month and it isn't a bad idea to get acclimated over again. Portia Portar, the bullfighting cape dancer, remains to headline the Shoreham supper show for a second week, with Dade and Weir, ballroom dancers, and Hal Sidare, eccentric novelty dancer, rounding out the show. And inside or out, Barnee and his Maxim Lowe orchestra keep your feet tapping the floor in tempting rhythms.

• • • •

My guess would be that the Hi-Hat will be ready about this time next week to announce what all the improvements going on there are about.

Ever See an 'Underworld Tango'?

Ever see an "Underworld Tango?" That's what Miquel and Enrica do in their Lotus Restaurant floor show presentation this week. They learned it in the native quarters in Buenos Aires. Below is Harriet, the autograph-collecting cigarette girl at the Mayflower Lounge.

Broadway

Men and Maids.

New York, Sept. 3.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL James A. Farley won't resign before January 1 (he will award the Pacific air-mail contracts late in October . . . Princess Rospigliosi (she was Marion Snowden and will be again) prefers Louis Reid . . . Abe Lyman and Tamara are Building Up To a Terrific Letdown . . . The Ellsworth Vines expect Sir Stork again . . . J. E. Otterson, Paramount boss, won't hand out any executive contracts, which will sadden George Schaefer and others . . . It is to be doubted that President Roosevelt will name the United States Attorney or United States Marshal for the New York district before he goes vacationing on the 24th . . . The Bill Powell-Jean Harlow wedding gives this column the last laugh . . . It was denied when it appeared here as a scooperoo . . . Bill (N. B. C. McCaffrey and Margie O'Connor, John Royal's secretary, will be married soon.

Bing Crosby

• • • •

The Dave Marxes (she was Charline Aber) expect Sir Toy Stork . . . Belle Baker will marry him just as soon as he gets the papers . . . Ralph Hitz will take over the Congress, in Chicago, November 1 . . . Sue Tenney, Frank Shields' sister-in-law, and Cliff Sutter are measuring engagement rings . . . Ditto Bill Plankinton and Marion Fernie, Milwaukee beauty . . . Adrienne Ames has promised to forego the final divorce papers if Bruce Cabot behaves . . . Dick Powell has warned Warners that unless they stop giving him those sugary roles, he'll hop, skip and jump to a British contract . . . The Bing Crosby-Dixie Lee friction rumors are laughable . . . Frank Parker and Dorothy Martin have kissed and made up.

• • • •

Two of the youngsters couldn't hold their liquor at George Vanderbilt's stag party and passed out cold . . . Dorothy Bannister and Jay (Clarence) Gould, the Wall Streeter, are on fire . . . Jimmy, the doorman at 21, flattened the guy who Mickey-finned Elliott Sperber at Reuben's, but everybody missed the story . . . Leon Block and one of the Gale sisters are blazing . . . The Sid Brokaws (she was Martha Mears) greeted Her Majesty, the Baby . . . The Robert Herndons have decided on Reno . . . Dick Himber flew to South Bend to clinch that auto commercial . . . The housekeeper at the Park Central Hotel will try to break Marie Dressler's will by producing a previous document . . . Janice Dawson lost the 3-carat diamond ring which Bobby Le Branche wrapped around her finger when the burglars broke in . . . Kay Stammers, cutest of the British net stars, has Fred Baehler to squire her, but Betty Douglas gets back to town today so-o-o . . . Kathleen Ardell has switched to Randy Burke . . . Sherman Fairchild is escorting Ruth Withers . . . Will Stewart's newest blonde is ineligible.

• • • •

Eddie Mannix blew $100,000 at Coast gambling tables last week . . . Harry F. Sinclair's daughter, Virginia and Doc McAuliffe are back together again . . . Charles Levine, whose Reno divorce trip was a scoop in this space, will recoup his fortunes there, too, (Reno, center of the mining industry, is the capital of the junk industry in which he piled up his early dough) . . . Finale of Billy Rose's "Jumbo" will cost $125,000 . . . Marion Chase, the chanter of smart lyrics, and Arthur Pollard, of Wall Street, are east of the moon . . . Harry Meyers, whose dad founded the City A. C. will wed Lucille Franklin . . . Will Mahoney, who went to England for a three-week engagement, will stay there for two years, a terrific hit! . . . Arthur Boran and Patti Chapin, C. B. S. singer, will tell it to a preacher . . . Jock Whitney rushed Starter Cassidy to the hospital in his own plane . . . It looks hopeless . . . "Top Hat," which cost $700,000, will gross $3,000,000.

• • • •

Joe Louis, the Detroit belter, bought a car for $5,000, but by the time they sold him all the doo-dads, it stood him $18,000! . . . French Casino's new show goes in tomorrow . . . Leo Reisman and a big show open at the Central Park Casino tomorrow . . . Nitza Vernille and Don Donaldson, dance team with Reisman, will excite raves . . . Wilmer Hines, tennis ace, and Frieda James, of the British Wightman Cuppers, are at 40-love, and love begins at 40 . . . His doubles partner, Henry Cully, is wooing Florence Le Boutillier, of the Long Island R. R. clan . . . Jimmy Grainger's lad, Edmund, is a chip off the old block . . . The son of the Universal sales manager produced "Diamond Jim Brady" and turned in a fine job . . . Sir Stork delivered a baby boy to the Sam Rosens (she was Elinore Fabian, of the theater family) . . . Recommended: Jack Lally's new book, "City Ward."

On The Air Today

That fellow Godfrey is back on the air after his vacation (as you well know by this time) but word now trickles through the hands of Mr. Godfrey's press agent advising that the "Godfrey Gazette," with a few changes in typography and minor embellishments, will be back on the air in about three or four weeks. The orchestra, the gentleman with the delightful Jewish dialect, Joe Krahling, and all the other "little Godfreys" will lend their talents to a new weekly series.

Mrs. Lou Gehrig, wife of the New York Yankees' first baseman, makes her radio debut tonight, WMAL, at 7—both as a composer and a singer. It seems Gehrig's bride of a year was known to be a composer of parts, but the singing came as a surprise. She'll add her own composition "I Can't Get to First Base With You" to Hits and Bits.

Rain had no effect on the daily presentation of "Curbstone Queries" yesterday noon. The noontime program went on under umbrellas of passers-by just as though the weather were perfectly in tune to outdoor broadcasting.

And this afternoon WJSV presents a "Man in the Fog" broadcast. Every man finds himself "in a fog" once in a while, but this will be the first occasion on which a large number of "men in a fog" has been aired. It will be heard at 4:30 p. m. No one at the WJSV studio knew who would present the quarter hour because every one who knew anything about the idea was "in a fog." Incidentally, the program is off if the weather clears.

Belle Barnes, of Washington, writes: "A while back I read a complaint about WOL announcers. Week before last I heard a new voice from WOL at night. He never announced his name, but to my way of thinking he is head and shoulders above any announcer on any local station. Who was he?"

WOL advises that the "voice" heard belonged to Sam Brown, who was relieving Frank Young, on vacation.

For short wave fans: Jessica Dragonette will be the star attraction on a "Galaxy of Stars" program, at 7 p. m., W2XAF, Schnectady. Mario Cozzi and Hugo Martinelli will also be heard. The program is for the special attention of South American listeners.

Words to Victor Herbert's "Badinage" have just been written by Holland Robinson, and the new song will be heard for the first time in the "Spotlight Revue," WMAL, at 2:30 p. m. Muriel Wilson, who has sung every Herbert soprano role in her radio career, will be the vocalist. William F. Seals talks on Washington's proposed crime commission, WRC, at 9:15 p. m.

Joe Humphreys, veteran announcer of the prize ring, will be "visited" tonight in an Intercity net program, WOL, at 8. Humphries is recovering from a critical illness. Dempsey, Tunney, Canzoneri, Benny Leonard and Jack Johnson are expected to take part. Theatrical luminaries headed by Abe Lyman will play a part.

Dogs are forbidden in Radio City, but a week ago yesterday a German shepherd was shown every courtesy. Isa, the dog, was with Ethel Stevens, of New Haven, who is blind. I happneed to be watching a rehearsal of Ben Bernie and "all the lads" when Isa appeared in the studio. Bernie was out of the front row of seats, from which point he was directing the rehearsal, in a flash and the rehearsal went to pot for the time being while the "old maestro" and Isa talked things over. Bernie wisecracks a lot on his programs about horses (the kind that run the wrong way), but he certainly showed a definite fondness for dogs that afternoon.

Hog Cholera Takes Toll In Washington County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 3.—New outbreaks of hog cholera in Washington County have resulted in the death of a number of swine. The section along the Cayetown pike, where a number of hogs died three weeks ago, is the scene of the latest outbreak.

The source of the orignial outbreak was traced by Dr. O. K. Hoffman, hog cholera expert in charge here, to hogs brought from West Virginia. A number of hogs brought from the same State were held responsible for an outbreak of cholera in Frederick County at the same time.

Where light is Heard and sound is Visible!

IN THE FAMOUS "HOUSE OF MAGIC" THE NEW G-E RADIO WAS BORN

GET SET for a surprise . . . a thrilling surprise when you see and hear this new 1936 General Electric Radio.

For in it you'll find these five great "House of Magic" developments:

NEW METAL TUBES* . . . smaller, more dependable tubes of enduring steel!

THE G-E SENTRY-BOX . . . controlling as many as five separate broadcasting bands . . . outpost of a most vigilant sentinel!

THE G-E PERMALINER . . . an ingenious device that keeps the receiver at "concert pitch" year in and year out.

THE G-E STABILIZED SPEAKER . . . supremely sensitive . . . reproducing speech and music with all their true tonal color!

AND THE G-E SLIDING-RULE TUNING SCALE . . . showing only one tuning band at a time . . . listing all stations in a line—as easy to read as a ruler!

Five milestone-marking features that endow the 1936 G-E Radio with a matchless brilliancy of tone . . . a lasting brilliancy of performance.

*Metal radio tubes, invented and perfected by General Electric, are made for General Electric by the RCA Mfg. Co. Complete receivers built by General Electric at Bridgeport, Conn.

MAKING A BEAM OF LIGHT SCREAM! That's one of the many strange and startling things they do in the G-E "House of Magic." Here, too, they change sounds into flashes of light . . . to be seen and studied as well as heard. Only through such research can the secrets of sound be uncovered . . . unwanted noises silenced . . . that purity of tone gained for which the New 1936 G-E Radio is outstanding.

STEEL TRIUMPHS OVER GLASS! In the G-E "House of Magic," scientists created new metal tubes that have eliminated shielding cans and the annoying "squeals" and "crackles" caused by them.

Notably New G-E Radio Features

Metal Tubes . . . Sentry-Box . . . Permaliner . . . Stabilized Dynamic Speaker . . . Sliding-rule Tuning Scale . . . Tuning Bands for domestic and foreign reception plus extended long-wave and ultra short-wave bands . . . Lonote Compensation . . . Noise Control . . . High- and low-speed Station Finder . . . Precision-tuning Indicator . . . Shadow-band Tuner.

A SENTINEL OUT OF "THE ARABIAN NIGHTS!" You'll find him in the Sentry-Box of the 1936 G-E Radio. Challenging the thousand and one radio waves that demand entrance of him . . . permitting only one wave to pass—the wave you're dialed to hear.

SEE AND HEAR IT! AT YOUR NEAREST G-E RADIO DEALER'S, PRICED AS LOW AS $34.95

HEAR LONDON, PARIS, ROME with this smartly-styled table receiver, Model A-63 (above). Six metal tubes . . . two reception bands, $47.50 Walnut cabinet.

Accent on Youth Will Be the Motif of Fall Hats Designed by Madame Lilly Dache

Kit Presented To Purchasers Of Cosmetics

Eight-Piece Cocktail Sets of Chromium Are Ideal as Wedding Gifts.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HERE'S a temptation you'll find hard to resist! A one dollar bill is worth twice as much if you spend it at a cosmetic counter in a downtown store. All this week, the charming representative of a well known line is there to explain the many good features of her house. If you buy $1 worth of goods from her, whether it's powder, cream, lotion, a box of those herbal blackhead packs, or what-not, you'll be presented a trial kit free.

This contains a bottle of skin freshener, a jar of cleansing cream, a nourishing cream, smoothskin oil, powder and rouge. The kit is suited to many purposes. Take the cleansing cream, for instance. It actually has the fresh juice of lemons in it that gives it a delightful, clean fragrance. Used regularly on your skin it has a slight bleaching effect which is just right to clear up late summer complexions.

The smoothskin oil, when mixed with the nourishing cream, makes a super rich concoction extremely fine for excessively dry skins and excellent for rubbing in to the creepy skin around your eyes.

Kitchen Book Shelf.

WHAT A BOON for the busy housewife, the new kitchen book shelf. Don't be deceived by the name, nor by the appearance, either, for what looks like a very small box of six books labeled berries, jellies, vegetables, pickles, etc., turns out to be six little containers filled with labels. These labels are all ready for the jelly and preserve jars soon to fill the pantry shelf.

Lunch Kits for School.

SCHOOL DAYS are mighty close. Young people taking their lunches with them every day will find the Handy Andy lunch kits just grand. They are attractive enameled metal boxes, shaped like a small suitcase, and complete with half-pint vacuum bottle which will keep hot drinks hot and cold drinks cold.

The box is divided into two compartments. One is for sandwiches or cake, the other for fruit.

It's a wise parent who invests in a Handy Andy. You can't beat one for keeping lunches fresh, and providing proper proportions for a tasty little snack at lunch time. The price is $1. Handy Andys are available in colors.

Safety Match Buds.

THAT IDLE nickel in your pocketbook will be put to good use if you spend it on one of the "safety match buds." These are miniature flower pots filled to an overflowing with bright flower buds. P. S. The buds are matches.

Six Portraits.

Here's a marvelous offer you can't pass by! One of Washington's very best photographers will make six lovely portraits of your child and charge you only $10.

The portraits themselves seem too good to be true. But the artist back of the camera has a knack with children and knows how to make them feel at ease and be perfectly natural. That's part of his secret. Proof that he's a master of his art lies in the pictures he's already taken. Connoisseurs of children's portraits say they are unrivaled.

So don't wait, take Johnny or Susie, or Mary, down right now and have them all "took."

American women like their hats youthful, breezy and dapper, believes Mme. Lilly Dache, outstanding hat designer. She says they are the best hat customers in the world because they buy so many hats, and like them to be different every season.

Off-the-Face Models Favored; New Interest in Turbans Seen

Lots of Color and Adornment to Be Used; Berets to Appear in Dozens of Types; Velvet, Velour and Suede to Be Good.

What are fall hat fashions? Lilly Dache, leading hat designer, discusses this question in the following article, sixth in a series of interviews with leading couturiers.

By Frances Mangum.

FRENCH WOMEN BUY FEW HATS but they want them wearable. American women buy many hats, and they want them amusing.

This is the theory of Lilly Dache, one of the outstanding hat designers in the United States.

Mme. Dache, native of Bordeaux, has plied her trade in both France and the United States. Without doubt, she says, designing the hats of American women is far more interesting (and incidentally, more profitable) than creating millinery for French women.

"The Americans," she declared, "are constantly seeking newer, and more different hats. They are what I call hat-minded and therefore wonderful to design for!"

Youthful Type Emphasized.

She said, however, that despite their inclination toward numerous hat styles, they inevitably respond to the youthful type. "And that is what I am emphasizing this season," she added.

A good example of this type, she says is the "off-the-face hat."

"There is no denying that hats worn daringly up and back are more youthful than others," she emphasized. "Brims, berets, and dozens of other styles are smart, and have all kinds of 'come hither,' but they do not give the little-girl effect of 'off-the-faces.'" She pointed to a dark red hat worn by one of her models. It was made of a soft velvet with a halo roll of blue and rose around the top.

"This is an off-the-face hat," Mme. Dache said, "but it is more. It is worn well back on the head, leaving the hair clearly exposed. More extreme than last year's!"

She confessed she is influenced this season by renaissance, Turkish and Persian styles. "You will see, she said, how many of the rich stain glass colors I am using, and also how many of the lavish Oriental combinations.

"Many of my hats," she continued, "are designed directly from old paintings. See, I have a library of ancient books and documents with illustrations." Picking up a volume lying on a low coffee table in front of her, she turned to a picture showing an Italian bandit of the renaissance period.

"Here is the hat which I designed from that," she said. It was black felt with a high crown, trimmed with a single black glossy feather. While the hat was adapted to the present-day mode and extremely modified to suit modern tastes, nevertheless its resemblance to the hat in the picture was striking.

From a painting of Luini's "Virgin," Mme. Dache designed a hat for Loretta Young. This was outstanding for the generous back drapes in black, giving the effect of a nun's veil.

Despite the number and variety of her hats, Madame Dache predicts the forthcoming season will see a concentrated interest in turbans.

"In the first place," she said, "almost anyone can wear a softly draped turban. They are readily adjustable and adaptable. Secondly, they are ideal to wear with suits and coats which have high fur collars. Brims are burdensome then.

Draped Hats With Draped Dresses.

"I am particularly interested in draped hats," she said, "because I believe they will be extremely smart with draped dresses!"

There are several interesting features characterizing the Dache hats this season. One is the widow's peak crown, or oriole. For this, Madame Dache was inspired by old paintings of court scenes during the time of the Medicis.

Then there is the monk's cap type of hat. This is a dashing little thing, the essence of chic, and ideal for anyone who "dares to be different!"

And the gold braid and embroidery. "Since this is going to be a particularly elegant season," she said, "I'm not only using lots of color but a wealth of adornment as well!"

Berets of Many Types.

"Berets? of course, berets. But you see I'm doing things to them," she laughed. "There's the two-story beret, the square beret; in fact, berets of dozens of types!"

One thing, though, I'm leaving off this season is the veil, I'm tired of them," she said. "And I think they've been terribly overdone!"

Materials which Mme. Dache believes will be particularly good this fall are velvet, velour and suede.

Watch tomorrow's Post for Mme. Nicole's advice on how to select a hat.

'Gin Marriages' Outlawed.

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—Gin marriages and other hasty nuptials will be banned in Pennsylvania after October 1 when the new "waiting period" amendment becomes effective. A three-day interval between application for and issuance of a marriage license is provided.

Here's a Way To Popularize Leftover Food

Intriguing Name Does the Trick; Bubble and Squeak Recommended.

By Dorothea Duncan.

AN INTRIGUING name often makes a dish of leftover vegetables more interesting—especially to children. The next time you have an assortment of leftover cooked vegetables don't throw them away in despair, but fix them into a version of the popular English dish called bubble-and-squeak. The name can't fail to appeal to the children.

Grind the cold cooked vegetables with the coarse blade of the food chopper. Blend the vegetables together and if they refuse to cling together in one mass, add a quantity of cooked and mashed turnips or mashed potatoes. Put the vegetables in a well buttered casserole and top with bits of butter. Place the casserole in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and bake until the mixture is heated through and a delicate brown on top, about 30 minutes.

The stronger flavored vegetables, turnips, parsnips, etc., that are not particularly popular, but are usually very inexpensive, may be used in small amounts in this dish provided that several other mild flavored vegetables are used also. The stronger flavored vegetables will serve to add character to the dish without giving it a too pronounced flavor of any one vegetable.

Bubble-and-squeak makes a filling luncheon dish, and we are using it in the following menus for a day:

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: In this town (Capitol Heights, Md.) there is a young man about 22 years of age who lost his right leg when an infant. The leg was taken off at the hip. He has an artificial limb that is several inches too short which compels him to amble along in a rolling and most inconvenient manner. He has had the limb a long time and has repaired it from time to time with nondescript pieces.

He is out of employment and has been for some time and when working at his trade of jewelryman makes meager wages. His family is not in a position to help him financially.

* * * *

A few weeks ago a boxing team of boys between 14 and 17 years of age, for which I am trainer, started putting on shows for the volunteer fire company here. The shows are given as part of a program to raise funds for purchase of a new fire engine. At the first show this crippled boy was selected to do the announcing. He is a "natural" at the job, and his announcing is better than that of many professionals I have heard.

* * * *

However, his limb greatly handicaps him. The gait he is compelled to adopt at first reacts against him in the public mind, but the fact that in spite of it he soon becomes a favorite with the crowd speaks well for his personality and ability.

* * * *

Now, the problem is this: Can you, through your column or by any other means known to you, help him to secure another limb? Among your readers there may be possessors of unused or discarded limbs who might give one to this boy, and he could adapt it to his need.

* * * *

I sincerely indorse this boy as being most deserving of any help along this line. He is a friendly and likable person of fine character. Should it be necessary for him to pay for the limb, I should trust him absolutely to do so if given sufficient time. I have contacted the Salvation Army and the Red Cross division at Walter Reed Hospital but neither could help him.

* * * *

Should any readers become sufficiently interested in this appeal to wish to investigate the worthiness of the young man, they are cordially invited to come to the show next Thursday evening about 8:30 o'clock, at Sixty-first street and Central avenue northeast. Respectfully,

R. E. E.

How to Proceed.

DEAR R. E. E.: H. C. Corpening, chief of the District Rehabilitation Service of the Vocational Education Division of the Office of Education, with whom I have discussed this young man's problem, advises me as follows:

If the young man is a resident of Maryland, his case should be brought to the attention of R. C. Thompson, No. 3 East Twenty-fifth street, Baltimore, Md. Mr. Thompson, as State supervisor of vocational rehabilitation, will investigate the case and do what he can for the boy. Mr. Corpening was inclined to believe Mr. Thompson will personally investigate the case by attending one of the boxing bouts and to believe that an investigation will result in the acquisition of a limb for the boy.

* * * *

"I'm sure Mr. Thompson will do what he can for the boy; either help him in getting a new limb or possibly see to the outright purchase of one," Mr. Corpening said.

In case the young man lives in the District, his problem should be referred to Mr. Corpening, whose office is in Room 622, Hurley-Wright Building, 1800 H street northwest. His situation is one which properly commands consideration by the Federal Vocational Rehabilitation Service, organized for the purpose of restoring disabled citizens to social usefulness.

* * * *

Aside from this, it is entirely probable your moving petition on behalf of the youth will bring a generous response from readers. Any communications will be forwarded. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Apple Recipes Contest Theme For This Week

IF YOU haven't been a lucky prize winner in The Post's recipe contest try again this week. The subject is apple recipes. Apple desserts, cobblers, pies, dumplings or Dutch apple cake, spiced apples, apple jelly or apple butter; these are just a few of the suggested recipes that can be entered.

In just a few weeks this contest will be over. Therefore, if you hope to be entered in the final judging it would be well to submit a recipe, on the assigned topic each week until the conclusion. Twelve $1 prizes are awarded weekly. All prize-winning recipes are saved for the final contest in which The Post and the National Electrical Supply Co. are offering three grand prizes: A Sunshine Mix Master, a G. E. Hotpoint coffee maker and a Dominion sandwich grill.

Address your favorite recipe to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post, and mail it in time to reach this office by Saturday at the latest.

Prize winners and their recipes will be announced in next Tuesday's edition of The Post and next week's contest subject will be given at the same time.

Mabel Vernon Tackles Biggest Job of Career

Veteran Suffragette Heads International Drive Against War.

By Dudley Harmon.

IT WAS a list of women connected with a more or less unpopular cause. The reader who scanned it stopped at a familiar name. "What's Mabel Vernon doing in this?" she asked.

"Mabel Vernon? Oh, she's just raising the money," came the answer.

In this brief question and laconic reply is the keynote to the personality of Miss Mabel Vernon, veteran suffragist, fighter for women's rights, and recently appointed world campaign director in a drive against war to be inaugurated Friday by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

"Only raising the funds," regarded by most campaigners as the most difficult assignment in a drive, is child's play to Miss Vernon, who in times past has picketed the White House, spent nights in jail, and haunted and hounded stubborn legislators in her battles for women's rights.

As a suffragette, Miss Vernon traveled far and wide over the country, addressing farmers, miners and mill workers. At one such meeting she was heckled for several hours before she was allowed to speak. At another rally she was the target of several missiles thrown by energetic nonsympathizers who believed that women's place is in the home. Miss Vernon displayed a characteristic nonchalance in speaking of the missile-throwing episode, dismissing it with a shrug of her shoulders and the words, "They never threw anything that really hurt, so it didn't matter."

Now, as campaign director of an international drive for peace, Miss Vernon faces the biggest job of her career. In the face of menacing war clouds over Europe, Miss Vernon plans to gather 50,000,000 signatures from men and women for a mandate to be presented by the people to their governments. The opening of this world-wide campaign for peace, set for Friday, marks the birthday of Jane Addams, internationally known founder of the league.

The mandate calls on the governments of the world to use peace agencies for settlement of present conflicts and to secure world disarmament and international agreements ending economic anarchy. The circulation of the people's mandate for signatures will be carried through primarily by league members in the 40 countries where the Women's International League is represented.

"In the event that the approaching war between Italy and Ethiopia can not be localized," Miss Vernon said, "we will attempt to exercise a pressure on governments greater than that exercised by any peace movement before in the history of the world. By enormous mass meetings and popular demonstrations we will strive to impress our policies so strongly upon the heads of governments that they will not dare to ignore them. I'm convinced that nobody really wants war, and that it's only a question of crystallizing and organizing sentiment into mass action. This I am confident can be done."

MISS MABEL VERNON.

Mrs. Micawber Type Mothers Make Life Dull

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

MRS. BROWN was first a mother and prided herself on it. She was a kind of Mrs. Micawber, always accompanied by children either in person or in thought. Her husband was chiefly thought of as the father of her children.

Before she was blessed with offspring she had been a gay and enterprising young woman, the center of an interesting group of friends and the life of every party. Now she was rather dull and preoccupied and grew animated only when she had a chance to discuss children, especially her own.

Her friends ceased to seek her out, her husband withdrew into his work and she soon found that her horizon was bounded by her children and their interests. Not that this disturbed her. She was a middle-aged woman and her children had gone out into the world before she took stock of her life. By that time it was too late to recover all that she had thrown away.

Children are important, but they do not and should not necessitate the daily sacrifice of the lives about them. If they are treated with so great a degree of attention they are very apt to be harmed, and certainly their home life is made narrow and dull.

A child now and then does or says something amusing or of interest to outsiders, but most retailing of nursery events is stale and unprofitable to all but the mother and perhaps the father. One of a mother's duties is to make her home interesting, to attract to it people of all kinds so that husband and children alike may enjoy the benefit of stimulating contacts.

The man who talks business in and out of hours is soon avoided by his friends; the mother who insists on her children in season and out is an unmitigated bore.

Upside-Down Stomachs Common; Surgery Only Means of Repair

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A SHORT time ago attention was called to the fact that in certain slender persons the stomach may lie low in the abdomen. It was pointed out that as a rule such a situation will bring about little or no interference with digestion. But it is quite another story when the stomach pushes upward through the diaphragm and lies partially within the chest.

It sometimes happens that there is a weak spot in the diaphragm. This may occur at the point where the esophagus or the abdominal aorta passes through, or because of injury the structure may be torn. At times a child may be born with some weakness in this important muscle. Whenever it is weaker than normal or is in any way defective, pressure may cause a bulging or stretching that will permit a portion of the abdominal contents to push upward into the chest.

Many of us have seen recent reports of a girl with an "upside down stomach." This apparently was a case of a weak or torn diaphragm that allowed the stomach to wander upward into the chest. It is not at all an uncommon occurence.

In a number of cases, the actual state of affairs may go unrecognized and many of these people reach middle life before it is discovered, if at all. In some instances the condition may not cause symptoms, or if symptoms exist they may be misunderstood or misinterpreted. Sometimes heart disease is thought to be present because of shortness of breath, which is often accompanied by a sensation of suffocation. Again there is difficulty in swallowing, and hiccups are not uncommon. One of the chief symptoms is a feeling of fullness after eating a meal or drinking a fair amount of fluid, and some patients state that they can hear a gurgling or splashing in the chest. As we would expect, there will be symptoms of indigestion attended with nausea and vomiting.

If stomach or chest symptoms are noticeable following an injury a careful investigation should be made to rule out a tear in the diaphragm. The X-ray has provided a positive method of diagnosis.

There is only one method of repair, and that is by means of good surgery. If adhesions are not present the abdominal contents can be replaced and the fault in the diaphragm closed by appropriate methods.

The New Treasury Issues.

In view of the recent weakness of the Government bond market, and the undersubscription of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds last week, the large refunding operation announced by the Treasury is doubly interesting. Secretary Morgenthau is putting the market for Government bonds to a severe test. The outcome will be a significent indication of its temper.

Holders of 4¼ per cent Fourth Liberty bonds, totaling about $1,250,000,000, will be given an opportunity to exchange them for either new 12-year Treasury bonds paying 2¾ per cent interest, or Treasury notes maturing in 3½ years, with 1½ per cent interest. For bonds of this type the interest rate is the lowest ever quoted by the Treasury. On the notes, however, the interest rate is slightly above that of a similar issue which was heavily oversubscribed last July.

Demand for Treasury paper of this sort may be expected from banks that have otherwise no means of investing their surplus funds. The fact remains, however, that this note offering, also open to cash subscription up to $500,000,000, carries the same rate of interest as the Government-guaranteed bonds which went undersubscribed last week. Only the maturity date is slightly curtailed, and bondholders who accept the exchange are to be rewarded by an extra month's interest.

To make its issues more attractive the Treasury has also abandoned the system of auction selling to the highest bidder in favor of a straight subscription basis. With the yield of the new bonds equal to that of comparable issues now selling slightly below par, however, it is by no means certain that this change will stimulate buying. Secretary Morgenthau has also made a gesture in the direction of balancing the budget. But the mere saving of interest charges, in face of steadily increasing deficits, does not offer great encouragement.

There is not much real satisfaction for the Treasury in this operation. If its issues are fully subscribed at these extremely low rates, the Administration will have as much reason to be apprehensive as pleased. For financing at such levels means stagnation in market for new capital issues, and consequent prolongation of the depression.

Laboratory Stars.

The type of star to which the laboratory savants must hitch their wagons is suggested by the extraordinary story of molybdenum. Molybdenum is a metal and a very shy metal, at that. It is never found in pure form, being mixed generally with the oxides of other metals such as iron, cobalt lead and tungsten. It is found in Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico, for the most part. Its importance lies in its properties as an alloy, for it can give to iron and steel a hardness and a toughness not otherwise obtainable.

The story begins in Germany in the early years of the century. An obscure metallurgist took to his laboratory one day a Japanese sword. In its blade he detected molybdenum which had probably entered the metal as an impurity. Impressed by the hardness of the steel, he traced back the source of the ore from which it had been made and ultimately a shipment of the crude material was ordered from Japan. Later, when the Japanese in turn analyzed cannon captured from the Germans, molybdenum was found in the barrels. The lasting qualities of the guns stirred metallurgical circles and provoked extensive experimentation.

As a result, molybdenum steel is now regularly used in shafts and axles, particularly those designed for use in automobiles. Having unusual strength, it is also widely used in airplanes where lightness combined with durability and strength is at a premium. Further, it is in demand for machinery such as is used in oil refineries and in Diesel engines to minimize deterioration from high temperatures and corrosion. With American converters today working at high pitch, molybdenum is a popular commodity. Last year the largest company supplying the metal reported a gross income of something more than $1,500,000.

But the end of the story is not yet reached. Just recently a professor in Delft, Holland, discovered that sound teeth contain much richer supplies of molybdenum than decayed teeth. Moreover, he has ascertained that the leaves of certain trees and plants increase in molybdenum content as they mature. What ultimate end the Dutch researcher hopes for through his abstract labors has not been announced. But he may be no further removed from the zenith of success than was his fellow scientist in Germany when he hitched his wagon to a small piece of metal in a Japanese sword. For this accidental discovery led ultimately to the practical development of one of the world's most valuable alloys.

To Be Continued.

Seldom has any international gathering been more dramatized than the session of the Council of the League of Nations which convenes in Geneva today. It is assumed that the issue of whether or not Mussolini can be restrained by collective action will be clearly decided within the next few days, and that on this anticipated clear-cut decision will hinge the entire future of the League.

Insofar as that loose-knit cooperative enterprise must either adjust the Ethiopian problem in a way which promises preservation of European peace, or else be condemned as futile in its major objective, dramatization of the issue is justified. But anyone who expects to see a well-defined crisis arise as soon as the Council session opens is probably doomed to disappointment. The League direction has a very skillful technique for postponing crises, based on the sound belief that a crisis averted is one for which mutually desirable solution can still be found. And it is certainly not in the Italian interest to be precipitate at this moment.

The Council meeting which opens today will be followed on Monday by the convening of the sixteenth annual session of the League's Assembly. At this gathering, which normally lasts about three weeks, the nearly three-score members of the League are all represented, as against the 13 nations (lacking Germany) which have seats on the Council.

During the Assembly period Geneva is a great sounding board of world public opinion. It is psychologically the worst possible time for any nation, even the most powerful, to flout international morality. No matter how many troops he mobilizes, or how bombastic his utterances, it is unlikely that Mussolini will indulge in clearly aggressive action while this grand jury of his peers is sitting in Geneva.

It is not certain, however, that the Italian temporization to be expected during September would necessarily prove in the interests of peace. On the one hand Mussolini would lose by holding his hand, because the fighting season in Ethiopia is short and because the present war footing of Italy is draining her overstrained resources almost as much as would be the case with actual hostilities. But, on the other hand, if both Council and Assembly sessions pass without securing any peace commitment from Italy, it will be widely asserted, particularly in the United States, that the League is supine and discredited. Doubtless this demoralization of League influence is the outcome for which Mussolini is playing, the more so because in October Germany's two-year notice of resignation becomes effective. That event will both emphasize the weakness of Geneva and focus French eyes more closely on the Rhine than on East Africa.

No sharp crisis, but a series of complicated diplomatic maneuvers are, therefore, likely to be the immediate order of the day at Geneva. Both Italy and Great Britain, as the chief protagonists in the drama, will tacitly agree on averting instant crisis. But while the Italians will strive to avoid any commitments for the future, the British will exercise all their influence to secure some pledge for a compromise solution falling short of violation of the League Covenant.

In any compromise, however, the opinion of Ethiopia is a factor to be considered. That astute monarch, Haile Selassie, has already said this in so many words by throwing a mysterious oil concession into the already bubbling pot. Probably this is not the last startling and disconcerting development to be expected as the Italo-Ethiopian tangle works out to its eventual unraveling. In a plot with a complexity beyond the wildest dreams of E. Phillips Oppenheim, we may be sure that reader interest will not be allowed to flag merely because solution of the problem is postponed.

City of Fair Dealing.

"Labor is quite satisfied," said the president of the Central Labor Union when approached for a statement on Labor Day. And well it may be, locally. For, without regard for internal union affairs or for the favored position given by recent legislation, the relations between labor and employers in Washington should be the envy of many a less fortunate community.

This happy state of affairs is clearly revealed in the record of the Central Labor Union's NRA committee, set up in June. Its members had instructions to investigate reports of labor standards lowered as a result of the collapse of the NRA. In three months the committee has received only about 150 complaints, and of these roughly half were found to be based on personal grievances. For a city of over half a million this is a remarkable record. Nor is it minimized by pointing out that Washington has practically no heavy industry. For it is in the distributive trades that chiseling has been found most pronounced, as shown in a report recently compiled by NRA statisticians.

So, although Blue Eagle standards have sagged, particularly in non-industrial lines throughout the country, the District of Columbia has kept its record relatively clean, to judge from the experience of local labor. And since the Central Labor Union committee deals with union and nonunion complaints alike, and since the services of the committee have been widely advertised by press and radio, it is safe to conclude that its report reflects local conditions with reasonable accuracy.

Washington, city of fair dealing, is to be congratulated.

Now Up To The States.

The first meeting of the District Unemployment Compensation Board was of more than local interest, for it is typical of sessions that are being held or soon will be held in nearly every State capital. As Secretary Perkins pointed out in her radio address Monday night, responsibility for putting the social security program into operation has now passed to local governments. The real test of this vast undertaking is yet to be made—under the auspices of the States and their administrative agencies.

"Federal legislation was framed," said the Secretary of Labor, "in the thought that the attack upon the problems of insecurity should be a cooperative venture participated in by the Federal and State Governments, preserving the benefits of local administration and national leadership." In matters so vitally affecting the welfare of far-flung local communities, dictation of policies from Washington would have been foredoomed to failure. Only the necessary minimum standards, therefore, were included in the national act. It is now the task of the States and the District to adapt the broad outlines of the national act to their peculiar needs.

In the State unemployment systems already set up there is a tendency to follow the minimum provisions of the act. That is wise during the initial stages of this complicated undertaking. The imperative need of making collections exceed benefit payments and of establishing sound reserves has again been emphasized by Secretary Perkins. When systems have once been established on a sound and permanent basis, however, it will be the responsibility of local governments to keep their development adjusted to local requirements. This will require no less foresight and intelligent planning than did the drafting of the national law.

Washington has been especially fortunate in securing an unemployment insurance board that truly represents the community. Except for its want of operating funds, inflicted by Huey Long, it has begun its work under favorable circumstances. There is good reason to believe that this group will evolve policies for a practical extension of the social insurance idea, in addition to administering the present law effectively. To some extent its problems will be unique, for Washington is not a typical industrial city. Yet the methods it employs may serve as an example to other communities. It is in thus working out means to solve its own problems that the local board may become a guide to similar State agencies, and not in serving as an experiment station for the Federal Government.

Perilous.

In his smashing defeat of Frankie Parker on Labor Day, Fred Perry did more than play some catapult tennis. He vindicated, on alien soil, a great English tradition.

There was gloomy weather at Forest Hills—there was, in fact, what Perry would call a Scotch mist. Who, in all Albion, could suppose that even savages would continue a sports' contest on such a day? So the British champion relaxed happily before an open fire at the house where he was visiting. Nevertheless, the incredible happened: the United States Lawn Tennis Association insisted that the competition for the national championship should go on.

Perry obeyed the behest. But how? Until then he had been playing a kindly hand, giving his opponents a face-saving break before settling the match. But hereupon, in righteous wrath, he promptly blasted the unhappy Parker out of the running: 6—4, 6—2, 6—0.

An open fire! Anybody who knows anything knows that all Britons are, if not fire-worshipers in general, at least open-fire worshipers in particular—that any open fire becomes the private property of any Briton who happens to stretch his long legs, or lift his coat-tails, before it—and that no Briton thus reverently basking before his open fire is to be disturbed with impunity by Western heretics who cultivate the cults of steam-heat, hot-water heating or air-conditioning.

"Don't," old Pythagoras advised, "stir the fire with a sword." To stir a fire worshiper with a tennis racket in equally perilous.

Budget Balancing in 1939.

From the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Those who have been hollering for a balanced budget at Washington will not emit any hosannahs when they read George Creel's statement in this week's Collier's that the Presidential plans call for budget balancing in 1939. The theory on which this Administration is proceeding calls for a gradual lessening of emergency expenditures as recovery proceeds and unemployment is reduced.

Of course, any attempt to estimate the receipts and expenditures of the Federal Government and for the coming years is the merest guesswork. If one assumes a gradual recovery, proceeding with a fair degree of uniformity through 1936, 1937 and 1938, the forecast of the Administration is perhaps roughly correct. But too many uncertain factors enter into the situation for anyone to feel safe in charting the future. The Italo-Ethiopian crisis, for example, is a disturbing element and one which may seriously affect the prospects for currency stabilization and the lowering of tariff barriers.

But even though the existence of these uncertainties cannot be denied, it appears that Mr. Creel's prognostication was made after consultation with the President. That means that the year 1939 is the year in which Mr. Roosevelt hopes to balance the budget. Apparently he hasn't much idea of adjusting the relationship between income and outgo before then.

No Inconsistency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of September 2, "Temporarily Closed," causes me to wonder just what is The Post's position on the Soviet's latest betrayal of its solemn pledges.

A former editorial, while asserting that the Soviet was in wrong in its differences with the American Nation, yet advised against the severing of official relations on the score that then the Soviet certainly would resort to underground methods and that such methods might be doubly difficult to combat.

Now The Post editorialist, while advising against "impetuously breaking off relations with the Soviet," admits that "the current warning is fully justified," and closes by saying: "If the U. S. S. R. officials are more interested in fostering world revolution than in maintaining the friendship of the American people" (there is no question but that they are) "they will have only themselves to blame for the consequent rupture of official relations."

"None To Say Hitler Nay."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler's attacks on the Catholic Church bring to mind the disagreements between Bismarck and the Holy See which have gone into history as the "Kulturcampf" (1873—cr. 1885).

Laws passed in 1873 forbade the clergy to discuss state questions in the pulpit. The regulation and supervision of education and marriage were declared to be purely civil matters. The teaching activities of the monastic orders were placed under state control. The state also attempted to regulate the training of the priests. The Pope forbade obedience to these decrees, and the fight was on.

But even under Bismarck's stern rule there was no interference with parliamentary government. People could vote according to their convictions. The priests were backed up by their flocks, and the Catholic (Centrist) Party became the most powerful block in the Reichstag. Very often, in order to carry out his civil program, the chancellor simply had to have these votes. And to get them he had to barter. And so, gradually most of the above measures were voided or else modified.

The Church, on the whole, won—and she won within the law.

In the present conflict, the cards are stacked against the Pope. As we read, there is neither a free press nor a free pulpit nor a free Parliament to say Hitler nay.

FRED VETTER.

A Growing Constitution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Constitution provides that Congress shall regulate commerce between the States and with the Indian tribes. These two phases of commerce, which seemed to be of parallel importance at the time when the Constitution was formulated, have become so far differentiated in volume and value that while the one is now a wholly negligible quantity the other constitutes the bulk of present-day legislation. The divergence of these phases of commerce, built on the same constitutional foundation, was neither willed, planned nor purposed, but grew out of changing economic and industrial demands of the machine age.

There was no warrant in the Constitution for the Louisiana purchase from France or the purchase of Florida from Spain. The annexation of Texas, the conquest of the Philippine Islands and the securing of the Panama Canal Zone from an unwilling state had no foundation in the Constitution. "We the people of the United States" as set forth in the preamble of the Constitution, intended only the population within the territory conquered from Great Britain and its natural posterity, but the growing demands of the Nation required augmentation so that the original intention of the Constitution has been so stretched, without formal amendment, as to include 3,000,000 square miles of continental area with numerous outlying possessions, containing 135,000,000 people. Indeed, the character of this Nation has been changed from a republic to that of an empire, without constitutional warrant. The motto of the expansionist is not that the flag follows the Constitution, but that the Constitution follows the flag.

Just as the Constitution, by its inherent potency and vigor, has been self-expansive to meet the growing demands of the Nation, both as regards territory and population, it has at the same time been unconsciously enlarged to cover the expanding economic and industrial demands. George Washington, Alexander Hamilton and John Adams knew as much about the demands of human rights and individual liberty as the subsequent generation. They gave us a Constitution which, with certain inevitable amends foreshadowed in the original document, was as perfect as human workmanship can be. But these fathers and founders knew nothing about the industrial processes that have developed in the machine age. They never even dreamed of the railroad, the steamship, the telegraph, the telephone, the automobile, aviation or the radio. They were therefore, in the nature of the case, incapable of forecasting legislation to deal with these, to them, unknown processes. Their wisdom was sufficient for their generation, but not for ours. The Constitution, therefore, will inevitably accommodate itself or be made to conform to the needs of the Nation and of the world as it now is, rather than as it then was.

The Defense Highway.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All this chatter about the dangerous character of the Defense highway is misleading, with slight foundation in fact. Any road with curves or sides of gravel is dangerous when a speed demon or a drunken fool is at the wheel.

I have used the highway more or less all summer. It is a fine road, with beautiful forests and farm-land scenery. The whole trouble is that many drivers—perhaps a majority—drive at excessive speed. When anything happens the machine, not being under control, comes to grief. Could anything else be expected?

If the driver of the recent wrecked car had been going at a moderate speed when he left the paved road, say, at 20 miles or less per hour, he undoubtedly would have regained the highway without trouble. Many drivers, too, take the curves at full speed and in the middle of the road, instead of reducing speed, blowing a warning and going over to the extreme right-hand side of the road.

The highway is all right. Many of those who use it are not! If this highway were 200 feet in width, accidents still would occur.

"Best And Brainiest."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of John Clark in The Post of August 30 confirmed what I already knew. Not being satisfied with the press' dope on Huey Long last winter, I wrote to a relative in Arkansas and asked him to get me the lowdown on him. I knew if anybody in the Southwest could give an unbiased account of Long, he could.

He wrote me that Long was the best Governor Louisiana ever had, and in his opinion Long was one of the brainiest men in the Senate. Let's hope the committee that investigates him will be fair enough to give him his due.

Defense Of The American University.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter which appeared in last Thursday's Post, signed by the "Apologetic G. W. U. Student," and in defense of Mr. Carliner, has done a grave injustice to the American University.

The anonymous writer states: "At the latter school Mr. Carliner must carefully submerge any tendencies he may have toward speaking his mind in favor of social change, else he will get the boot there, too." Such a statement casts serious reflection upon a higher institution of learning, or at least upon the American University. If such were the situation here, I can assure you that I should want to have no connection with it as a faculty member, nor do I know any of my colleagues who would.

Mr. Carliner will enter the university upon the same conditions as any other student. He does not have to subscribe to any particular views. The first statement in our requirements for admission reads: "Inasmuch as the enrollment in the college is limited, the faculty has adopted a plan of selective admission whereby only students of intellectual promise and seriousness of purpose are considered for admission." Had not Mr. Carliner come within this category he would have been rejected.

We were concerned only with his scholastic record and his moral character, not his religious or political views, just as with any other student. He must, of course, observe the college rules as to conduct, but we have no rule to suppress freedom of thought or fair exchange of opinions with fellow students and faculty members in campus and classroom discussion.

Speaking for myself, I welcome in my classes differences of opinions and a critical approach to problems of the day. I am sure that we have very much of this spirit on our campus and that Mr. Carliner will be respected for any opinions which he may be able to defend with sound reasoning. We hope that he will be no less tolerant toward the views of others, and if he is I expect that we shall mutually profit from the interchange.

The Post Impressionist

The Great War-Preventive.

Post Office, Wednesday.

THEY had all been talking about the cleverness of the Emperor Haile Selassie when Ted proposed his infallible war-prophylactic.

Anne said: "Isn't it devastating? Here's the dictator of what Dictator Mussolini calls a savage nation—and he (I mean the Emperor) pulls the shrewdest stunt in modern diplomacy. It's one of the shrewdest stunts in all diplomacy. And it's absolutely a hundred per cent up-to-date. The head of a weak country threatened by a strong country buys the financial interest of some of the world's richest corportations, the stock of which is held in two other countries, each more powerful that the country that is threatening his country."

Bill (he's Anne's husband) said: "But will it work? That's the test of any diplomacy: whether it will work or not. Haile Selassie wants either to avoid war or whip Italy. But he won't avoid war—and he may get licked himself—if the people he's sold half of Abyssinia to, don't defend it, or get their countries to defend it."

* * *

Mott said: "There'll be an awful yell in those countries if they try to go to war because of a threat to—or even an open attack on—these investors' investments: investments made with eyes wide open, mind you, right under the guns."

* * *

We ventured: "Perhaps you've all got the Emperor's motives wrong. Perhaps he doesn't hope to get allies by his lease—for it really seems to be only a lease, or concession, for exploitation: not a complete sale. Perhaps what Haile Salassie wants to have is just something left to rule over, in case he loses the war."

* * *

It was then that Ted said: "I know how to prevent war."

* * *

There came a chorus of derision: "Get Britain to close the Suez Canal? . . . Too late . . . Why didn't she close it months ago? . . . Because she could use the canal-tolls! . . . Well, then!"

* * *

But Ted persisted: "I don't mean this war in particular—if there's going to be one. I mean any war."

He persisted: "The other day I read in the paper a statement on the increase in the cost of war. Talk about the rise in the cost of living! It's nothing, compared with the rise in the cost of dying—at war. This writer I'm talking about said that it used to cost only about a dollar to kill a man in Caesar's wars, but that now it averages away up in the thousands of dollars."

* * *

Ted is not like the uncle in "The Wrong Box," who could—and simply would—tell you how many bricks were used to a mile of Liverpool pavements, or how many spools of thread you would have to buy if you wanted to mark the equator with them. But Ted does pick up some peculiar information.

"My idea," Ted explained, "is just this:

"If the price of modern war is as high as that, and if—as we know—almost no private soldier relishes fighting, why not buy an enemy rather than fight him?

"Put it low. Say it costs $5,000 to kill a soldier in battle. Very well: If Country A declares war on Country B, Country B would just issue a public promise of $2,000 to every A soldier who'd desert to her colors. I bet she'd have half of the A army in her camp before the first gas shell was dumped on the first noncombatants. The war'd have to end right there.

"And look at the saving," Ted concluded, "not only in cold corpses but in cold cash."

Everybody—that is, nearly everybody—became enthusiastic over that theory. It had all the simplicity of greatness. Anne wanted to collect enough money to telephone the Secretariat of the League of Nations. However, Bill (her husband, you remember) said that, since it was Country B (not Anne) which was going to save the $3,000 per soldier, Anne had better just send a letter with a two-cent stamp on it to Fred Libby and the National Council for the Prevention of War, over on Seventeenth street.

Anne was on her way to her typewriter when it was discovered that none of us had two cents. And then she was on her way to the telephone (because the telephone-bill wouldn't come in until October 1st) when Mott contributed—a few words.

* * *

Mott said: "I don't think you can stop war that way, because I don't think that way would reduce the cost of war—it'd boost it. What," Mott inquired, "would prevent Country A from raising Country B's bid—and applying the raised bid to deserters from Country B's army? You mightn't have a pitched battle, but you sure would have a cut-throat auction."

"Well," Ted argued, "nobody'd be killed, anyhow."

"Oh, wouldn't they be?" asked Mott. "The nation that won the auction would starve. I," Mott declared, "prefer picric acid."

Reproach to Democracy.

New York, Sept. 3.

THE fact that after all these years and in view of his record the political intentions of William Randolph Hearst are conceded even the most trifling importance seems to me to constitute about the most embarrassing reproach that it is possible to deliver against a people who claim the right to govern themselves. It suggests that they aren't quite ready for the responsibility. Yet Mr. Hearst has declared himself in favor of something which he calls a Jeffersonian Democratic Party, with a nod to Al Smith, and this is undoubtdly a "development" in the campaign, so the indictment is plain. At this early stage of the game it is not much of a "development," to be sure, but nobody will deny that his declaration of intentions is much more important than a similar declaration from say, a man working in a store.

And just who is Mr. Hearst that a political announcement from him is of greater weight than one from the man next door or a man working with a shovel down a hole? He is just one man, isn't he, with a right to his preferences and intentions but with only one vote of his own?

He is all that and more.

• • • •

MR. HEARST owns a string of papers and magazines and some big moving picture interests. To be sensible about it, a man with these properties at his command naturally has more influence in the community than a man who is just a nobody. Ideals and theories are fine on paper, especially in editorials, but it is just as well to acknowledge the facts of life, one of which is that a publisher—even a man with only one paper in a small town—outranks in political importance the man who has only his vote.

But even facing this fact there remains Mr. Hearst's record. He has kidded the American people all this time in the towns in which he operates—now churning them up, now cooling them down for the fun of watching them respond like so many waltzing poodles in a vaudeville act, often changing sides abruptly, indorsing people or issues that he formerly condemned—Al Smith, for example—and still he has remained a "power." How great a "power" I do not know. But sufficient to command attention even now.

It would be hard to find a national political figure or a big issue within Mr. Hearst's time that he has not fought and supported both, and always with a tremendous, noisy, patriotic zeal and always with some following. For example, he supported Frank Roosevelt last time; but his new invention, the Jeffersonian Democratic Party, is intended to fight him. And it is no sure thing that by election day next year he won't be thumping the tub for Roosevelt again. It makes absolutely no difference to Mr. Hearst that he has been for or against a candidate or proposition in the past. He can't be embarrassed, and his opinion of the intelligence of his fellow Americans is so low and based on such sound experience over the years that he never troubles to justify a change. He just switches over, and the cartoonists and writers who were tearing the heart out of someone or something destroy the stuff they had prepared for tomorrow and stay on overtime doing pictures and pieces from the opposite viewpoint.

• • • •

IT IS one thing to enjoy Mr. Hearst for just what he is, but something else to take him seriously and believe what he says on political matters. But I am afraid it is all too true that there are not a few citizens gullible enough to take him seriously.

It is amazing——

No, let's not get naive again.

It is not amazing that there are still people entitled to the vote who are innocent enough to read Mr. Hearst's intentions, his ringing letters to himself on the subject of Americanism, his yearning for horse-and-buggy democracy, written in his castle on his fabulous barony in California, and believe in him. That's just it. It isn't amazing at all. Because who is going to contend that people who followed Mr. Hearst in some of his past political adventures, undertaken in sheer playfulness just to see if anyone would follow him, should suddenly grow wise?

• • • •

I LIKE to read his editorials, particularly his tributes to the horse-and-buggy fathers of "this great democracy," and picture the old man sitting in his moving-picture castle on his private mountain range in California, with his art galleries, his stables full of horses, cars and planes and his sense of power over thousands of men, chuckling to himself as he goes back over his stuff to stick in the word "democracy" here and there.

That Hearst! He is a one!

The Once Over

By

H. I. Phillips

A Letter to Haile Selassie.

Haile Selassie,
Lion of Judah,
Ethiopia.

Dear H. S.:

You seem so disturbed by the prospect of war that I am writing you this friendly letter for your guidance in the matter. First of all, you should not let people know you abhor war, as it will put you in a bad light with the civilized nations. War will give you all the prestige of civilization. You can't go on forever minding your own business, loving peace and otherwise behaving like a savage.

• • • •

War will do a great deal for you, Haile. You will see all the triumphs of civilization close up instead of in an occasional movie. Things like air raids, bombs, poison gas attacks, and all that sort of stuff. You can't get anywhere among the big nations by keeping yourself ignorant and uninformed on the fine points of promiscuous slaughter. You evidently need training in breaking treaties, ignoring pledges, repudiating promises and forgetting promises, and you will never get it, Haile, by staying aloof and not mixing with the great powers.

• • • •

If you are going to get anywhere in the world today you have got to know more than you do about repudiation. It's very vital.

• • • •

Of course, you may lose the war, but think of what it will mean. You will get all the blessings of civilization. You will get skyscrapers, traffic congestions, hit-and-run drivers, bad liquor, overnight divorces, filibusters, sound wagons, radio gags, and everything. It will bring you kidnapings, electrocutions, athlete's foot, two-piece suits, shirts with detachable collars, and even the autograph craze.

• • • •

You will even get golf, Haile. Think of that now!

• • • •

• • • •

So accept the war, Haile. It will mean a lot to you and to your people.

Yours,
ELMER TWITCHELL.

History In The Making

Statesmen Of World Convene To Shape New Destinies.

By Edward Acheson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

ON Wednesday, September 4, 1935, the world will be treated to a remarkable sight. At Geneva a group of statesmen will meet to determine the course of history, not only with the full and grim realization of the actual makers, but also of the whole audience of public opinion.

Not since the Treaty of Versailles has general interest and concern been so universally centered on an event. And rightly. For out of it may come war in Africa, war in Europe, communism in Italy, an unholy alliance between all the disgruntled powers on the Continent—or peace may come of it, peace and a revision of nationalist economies, the re-emergence of democracy as a world force and an enhanced confidence in the hope of ultimate security through collective responsibility.

Truly, to September 4 can that tired phrase be applied—it is a momentous occasion.

Never before has a League issue been so clear cut. Never have the ramifications of a problem been so perfectly delineated. The alternative courses of action are too obvious to permit of face-saving. Someone's countenance is destined to be considerably disfigured before the sessions now opening at Geneva come to their termination.

• • • •

ON the one hand it is possible to apply to a recalcitrant Italy weak sanctions or none. On the other, the British and French navies and air forces at the behest, and only at the behest of the League of Nations, can close the Suez Canal to Italian military use.

Between those two policies there is no compromise. Outside of them, the Italian attitude remaining unchanged, there is, apparently no solution.

And each alternative has its logical conclusion:

The European press is inclined to believe that Italy will be denounced as an aggressor and an ineffectual financial and munitions ban declared. Which would in no way deter Mussolini from his adventure; which would disregard the ancient maxim that when you strike at a king you must kill him: which would admit the accomplished fact of a shattered "Stresa Front" and reduce a dare-nothing League to a shambling impotence: and which, finally, would tend to align an armed and perhaps victorious Italy with the Austro-German combination including Hungary and Bulgaria, certainly, and, in all probability, Poland.

But, for the moment, this negative policy would keep the peace of Europe, confine the war to one of Abyssinian extermination.

• • • •

THE secondary results are, of course, incalculable. Whether Mussolini can fulfill his time-schedule — effective conquest in seven months—is widely debated by experts. With tropical rains, immobility will descend on Ethiopia next May. The financial and economic strain of 1935 will be infinitely multiplied in 1936. The morale of a newly "mighty" Italy is a wholly unknown factor. Victory may very well prove to be Pyrrhic.

The alternative policy which, conceivably but improbably, the League may adopt envisages the closing of the Suez Canal to Italian troop and munitions transport. The concerted action of England and France could easily achieve this end, regardless of its strict legality. And such action would not, as is so commonly stated in the English press, necessarily mean war. It is beyond even the realms of Mussolini's imagination to challenge a decision of the League translated into action by two such great powers simultaneously.

The results of this unlikely course are highly speculative. The League would lose a powerful and disloyal member. But a League which had successfully dared to restrain a great power, although temporarily weakened, would have laid the basis for enhanced authority in the future.

• • • •

ARMED intervention would, necessarily, have tremendous repercussions within Italy herself. The trend toward an Italo-German alliance would be inevitable, limited only by the value Germany places on British friendship. On the other hand, it is a foregone conclusion that any change in the form of the Italian government will usher in a radical regime.

Beyond the immediate and startling reverberations of the policy of "armed-restraint" there are two inevitable corollaries which, although frequently mentioned in England, have not as yet received due consideration. In the first place "collective action" of this type presupposes on the part of Great Britain the admission that the Suez Canal is, not only in theory, but in practice, a matter of collective concern. In effect it places that all-important link in the India-route under mandate to the League. As a step toward increasing the prestige of Geneva, nothing could be of greater significance.

Secondly, and no less important, is the Franco-British admission of Italy's need for expansion. This has been stated, and not only stated but tactily admitted throughout the Three-Power discussions. Time and time again the English and French diplomats have reiterated that they oppose Italian means, not Italian ends. If, therefore, England invokes "sanctions" merely to retain the status quo, the country opens itself to severe criticism.

• • • •

AS Mr. Kingsley Martin says, England "took for itself too many mandates in 1919—to go no farther back—and since Ottawa it has tightened its monopoly over the dependent colonies. This cannot justify the brutality of Italian policy, more especially since Abyssinia is open to peaceful exploitation. But it does create an atmosphere in which the dissatisfied powers may with some reason arraign the sated empires. To stop this iniquitous war would be only the first preliminary step toward the just solution of the world-wide problem of economic opportunity."

That this is not mere "wishful thinking" is confirmed by the importance which British economists have recently given to the question of "reserved markets" and their effect on world recovery. "The Ottawa Policy" is as nearly eclipsed as its originator, and in spite of the vociferous isolationist press, a spirit of compromise seems to be gaining ground.

Those, then, are the alternatives—to annoy Italy by useless condemnation or to restrain Italy by armed intervention. England places a great weight on America's attitude and ponders the moot question of whether "Empire interests" are already involved to any inextricable degree. The French press whimpers that England is trying to place the decision on France's shoulders. Which is not strictly true since it rests there now—and squarely.

• • • •

HOWEVER, with so many questions involved, so many unknown factors to be reckoned with, and Europe so tensely tremulous, it is generally thought in England that the present government will, by delay, indecision, and overcaution find itself in the position of having chosen the greater of two evils.

In any event, Wednesday, September 4, will be a date of incalculable importance. It will mark the beginning of the end—of something.

Flesh and Blood and Agony.

I WAS down on Cape Breton Island, half way through a 4,500-mile vacation drive, when I came upon a magazine article which will, beyond doubt, be considered the most impressive short piece of prose of 1935. Famous it is already, mentioned and quoted on every hand, but it is not a tithe famous enough. Which is why, today, I want to turn this column over to a condensation of J. C. Furnas' essay on automobile accidents, "—And Sudden Death," which appeared in the August Reader's Digest.

You will find these excerpts scarifying, nauseating. Well and good—that is their intention. For figures no longer mean anything to us; 36,000 automobile fatalities a year is as dry as a graph line, and the fact that when you drive at 60 miles an hour you are going through space at the rate with which you would hit the ground if you drove your car off the roof of an eight-story building is merely an item of curiosa. All of us lack the imagination to translate such terms into result upon flesh and blood. And just that, poignantly, searingly, horrifyingly, Mr. Furnas accomplishes below.

What this country needs is some good military band music to lend death by automobile a little pomp and pageantry. It's already got the other side of war.

• • • •

"NO artist," writes Mr. Furnas, "working on a safety poster would dare depict an accident in full detail. That picture would have to include motion-picture and sound effects, too—the flopping, pointless efforts of the injured to stand up; the queer, grunting noises; the steady, panting groaning of a human being with pain creeping up on him as the shock wears off. It should portray the slack expression on the face of a man, drugged with shock, staring at the Z-twist in his broken leg, the insane crumpled effect of a child's body after its bones are crushed inward, a realistic portrait of an hysterical woman with her screaming mouth opening a hole in the bloody drip that fills her eyes and runs off her chin.

"If you customarily pass without clear vision a long way ahead, make sure that every member of your party carries identification papers—it's difficult to identify a body with its whole face bashed in or torn off.

"The driver is death's favorite target. If the steering wheel holds together it ruptures his liver or spleen so he bleeds to death internally. Or, if the steering wheel breaks off, the matter is settled instantly by the steering column's plunging through his abdomen."

"THIS spring the wrecking crew pried the door off a car which had been overturned down an embankment and out stepped the driver with only a scratch on his cheek. But his mother was still inside, a splinter of wood, from the top driven four inches into her brain as a result of son's taking a greasy curve a little too fast. No blood—no horribly twisted bones—just a gray-haired corpse still clutching her pocketbook in her lap as she had clutched it when she felt the car leave the road.

"A trooper described a head-on collision in heavy traffic—five cars in one mess, seven killed on the spot, two dead on the way to the hospital, two more dead in the long run. He remembered it far more vividly than he wanted to—the quick way the doctor turned away from a dead man to check up on a woman with a broken back; the three bodies out of one car so soaked with oil from the crankcase that they looked like wet brown cigars and not human at all; a man, walking around and babbling to himself, oblivious of the dead and dying, even oblivious of the dagger-like sliver of steel that stuck out of his streaming wrist; a pretty girl with her forehead laid open, trying hopelessly to crawl out of a ditch in spite of her smashed hip. A first-class massacre of that sort is only a question of scale and numbers—seven corpses are no deader than one. Each shattered man, woman or child who went to make up the 36,000 corpses chalked up last year had to die a personal death."

"BUT all that is routine in every American community. To be remembered individually by doctors and policemen, you have to do something as grotesque as the lady who burst the windshield with her head, splashing splinters all over the other occupants of the car, and then, as the car rolled over, rolled with it down the edge of the windshield frame and cut her throat from ear to ear.

"None of all that is scare fiction; it is just the horrible raw material of the year's statistics as seen in the ordinary course of duty by policemen and doctors. Every time you pass on a blind curve, every time you hit it up on a slippery road, every time you step on it harder than your reflexes will safely take, every time you drive with your reactions slowed down by a drink or two, every time you follow the man ahead too closely, you're gambling a few seconds against this kind of blood and agony and sudden death.

"Take a look at yourself as the man in the white jacket shakes his head over you, tells the boys with the stretcher not to bother, and turns away to somebody else who isn't quite dead yet. And then take it easy."

Square Goldfish Bowl

By

William Lyon Phelps

THIS is the title of an article in the Birmingham (England) Sunday Mercury, by a gentleman named William Smith. He has a pretty wit. He says that a fish student has made the most epochal discovery of this generation—namely, that goldfish prefer square bowls to round. For four days and nights without rest, this expert studied the yellow beauties as they went round and round the circular bowl; after three days and two and one-quarter hours, two goldfish were staggering; which shows that this continuous motion brought on a kind of vertigo. The third fish was all right; because every now and then he reversed; being wise enough to understand the importance of this change, but one can not expect that more than one in three goldfish will be original.

• • • •

Furthermore, says Mr. Smith, the goldfish prefer the square bowl. This "would permit of their playing puss-in-the-corner with each other in the long winter evenings." Again, each one of the three fish would have his own especial corner all to himself, with an extra one as a community house. Mr. Smith winds up by the slogan, "Give Your Goldfish a Square Deal With a Square Bowl."

Mr. Smith has an explanation for the recently published statement that England is tilting to the east; the east coast is sinking at the rate of half an inch a year. "This is probably due to the fact that Mr. G. K. Chesterton lives in Norfolk."

Mr. Smith does me the honor to comment on my statement that the English climate is partly responsible for the excellence of English literature; "our rotten weather keeps us so much indoors. And, if anybody wants proof, we point to the fact that so much of our literature bears all the signs of fog."

This man Smith will bear watching.

Legionnaires Gathering For Session

2,500 Are Expected in Ocean City; Convention Starts Tonight.

3 in Commander Race; Speakers to Include Nice and Devine.

By Clyde H. DuBose,
A Staff Correspondent.

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 3.—The first delegates to arrive for the annual convention of the Maryland Department of the American Legion were welcomed today.

Although it has been estimated that approximately 2,500 Legionnaires, members of the auxiliary and others will attend, only a part of this number will be present when the convention opens tomorrow night in the high school auditorium.

"Campaign managers" have redoubled their work for three candidates for commanders.

Heading the list is Roy L. Pyle, of Phoenix, who represents the North Central district. The others are Paul L. Higinbotam, of Baltimore, and Charles S. Houck, of Frederick. The latter represents the Western Maryland district.

New Vote Plan Advocated.

One of the first resolutions to be put before the veterans will call for passage of an ordinance to take the vote from the State Department's past commanders.

Backers of the ordinance cite the ever increasing number of past commanders, which is overbalancing the voting scheme. Each post is allowed only one vote for each 50 members, plus the vote of past department commanders. This, it is said, is unfair to sections that have not placed commanders.

Another expected resolution will seek to establish a department newspaper aimed to reach every legionnaire in the State. Papers have been established by other State departments.

A cash bonus resolution is also declared a certainty.

It was announced today that Maurice F. Devine, of Manchester, N. H., slated for the national commandership, will address the convention Thursday.

Gov. Nice to Speak.

Registration will be held all day tomorrow at the George Washington Hotel. At 8 p. m. there will be a joint meeting of all branches of the legion, open to the public.

Following this Gov. Harry W. Nice will speak. Mayor W. Thomas Elliott, of Ocean City, then will give an address of welcome. Greetings will be brought by Department Commander John F. McNulty, Chef de Gare Bushrod R. Watts, of the Forty and Eight; le departmental chapeau, Mrs. Samuel Couper, of the Eight and Forty, and Benjamin F. Wolfson, of the Sons of the Legion.

Among the committee chairmen who will offer resolutions are John W. Jennings, distinguished guest committee; Albert N. Greenfield, trophies and awards; J. E. Wheatley, resolutions; Vinton D. Cockey, constitution and by-laws; Kent R. Mullikin, organization and rules; Edwin L. Cox, time and place; E. O. Hobbs, publicity; Gorman L. Schaible, credentials; Lawrence R. Smoot, elections; T. B. Cockey, legion home, and Fred G. Baugh, finance.

Williamsport to Ask Funds for Reservoir

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsport, Md., Sept. 3.—Williamsport plans to construct a 300,000 gallon reservoir for an emergency water supply and will make application to the WPA.

This town has been connected with the main line of the Hagerstown pumping station on the Potomac River for several years.

Town officials believe an emergency supply necessary in case of a breakdown of the pumping station.

Clarksburg Brewery To Make Beer Again

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 3.—The old brewery here which was operated by the Clarksburg Brewing Co. before West Virginia became a prohibition State in 1914, soon will turn out beer again.

The Old Tavern Brewing Co., which operates a brewery at Fairmont, has acquired the property and will spend $75,000 improving the plant before it is opened in about three months.

Bristol Negro, 101 Years Old, Recalls 'Lean' Civil War Days

George Washington Jones Was Named for General After His Visit.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Sept. 3.—George Washington Jones, colored resident of Washington street, this city, is 101 years and 8 months old, and remembers when Bristol "weren't nothing' but a bunch of cabins scattered around," and when the late Maj. A. D. Reynolds, one of Bristol's former business leaders, "used to sell tobacco out of a covered wagon." "Marse Reynolds had a powerful nice pair of horses," he says.

George Washington Jones was born in 1834 on the plantation of Col. John Preston, "who fought in the Revolution War." The Preston plantation, located in Washington County near Bristol, was one of the largest in southwest Virginia.

George Washington Jones remained a slave until "Abe Lincoln got to be present and up popped the Yankees."

One of the greatest events in the memory of the slaves of the Preston plantation was the visit Gen. Washington paid to southwest Virginia. He stopped for a short time at the Preston estate and all the slaves gathered around to see him. George Washington Jones' mother named him for the great general and passed the story down to him.

When the War Between the States broke out "things began to pop." He remembers that "Simon took marster's horse and rode to the big fight at the salt works (Saltville, Va.) and got killed." He relates that during those four years "times were mighty hard."

After the war Jones stayed with "Marse Preston until he died." He then came to Bristol and began working as a section man on the Norfolk & Western Railway, operating from Bristol to Wallace's switch. He later worked as a brakeman on a run from Bristol to New River, then came a shift that sent him to Knoxville to "go on a run to Jellico. Then I come back to Bristol and told them I was through railroadin'." In those days, he said, engines burned only wood for fuel.

Girl at Prayers Shot In Rifle Accident

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Kingwood, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Martha Corple, 14, of Triune, was shot near the heart as a rifle on her bed was discharged as she knelt to say her prayers. Although her condition is serious, she is expected to recover.

Mrs. Anna Batton, a sister, told officers the rifle had been placed on the bed because a barking dog had been disturbing them at night.

Church Opens Session Today At West Union

West Virginia Brethren Conference to Hear Bishop Batdorf.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Union, W. Va., Sept. 4.—The annual session of the West Virginia United Brethren Conference will open here tomorrow at the United Brethren Church, of which the Rev. Clarence D. Edman is pastor.

The Rev. G. D. Batdorf, Harrisburg, Pa., presiding bishop, will make the opening address. He also will speak Sunday, the closing day.

About 80 clergymen and 100 laymen will attend the conference. Tomorrow's program includes holy communion and a memorial service conducted by the Rev. S. A. Jesse, of Mountain Lake Park, Md., a section of western Maryland being attached to the conference.

Tomorrow afternoon the Rev. Fred Slaughter, of Ripley, will conduct devotions and reports will be made by the superintendents, the Rev. W. G. Ware, Belington, east district, and the Rev. F. H. Capehart, Parkersburg, west district. T. Clayton Parsons, Ripley, conference treasurer, and the Rev. H. L. Koontz, Elkins, nominating committee chairman, also will report.

Dr. W. G. Clippenger, Westerville, Ohio, president of Otterbein College, and Dean C. E. Ashcraft, of Bonebrake Seminary, will speak tomorrow night.

Conference superintendents will be elected Friday morning when talks will be made by the Rev. E. E. Harris, Dayton, Ohio, and the Rev. F. E. Brininstool, Charleston, secretary of the Interdenominational Sunday School Council. The Revs. Ray N. Shaffer, Clarksburg; W. A. Knapp, Parkersburg, and E. H. Waters, Fairmont, will give 15-minute talks Friday afternoon. A missionary program will feature Friday night, with Mrs. J. M. Knight, Charleston, president of the Women's Missionary Association, in charge.

The Rev. H. W. Harrison, of Parkersburg, will give the closing address Sunday night. The Rev. J. M. Knight, Charleston, is recording secretary of the conference, and the Rev. O. H. Carder, of Point Pleasant, statistical secretary.

Lynchburg Officials Act To Settle Plant Strike

Lynchburg, Sept. 3 (AP).—Officials of the City of Lynchburg and the chamber of commerce took a hand in settling the strike of the S. & K. Knee Pants Co. workers here today.

Mayor Lewis E. Lichford, City Manager R. W. Hart, Councilman Abe Schewel and R. D. Ramsey, business manager of the chamber of commerce, conferred with officials of the factory this morning. In the conference the officials refused to recognize organizers of the strike who were sent here by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, but said they were willing to deal with local officers. Union leaders were called into a session early this afternoon and agreed to step aside.

Dove Hunting Season In Maryland Opens Soon

Baltimore, Sept. 3 (AP).—The first part of the dove-hunting season in Maryland will be September 21 to October 1, E. Lee Le Compte, State game warden, said today in announcing open seasons on various types of game.

Seasons for other game are: Railbirds, September 1 to October 31, and squirrel, September 15 to October 15, November 15 to December 31. In Garrett County the only open season is October 1 to 31. Federal law limits the bag of railbirds to 15 per day, and Sora to 25 per day. The squirrel limit is 10 per day, and doves, 20 per day.

Walton Contest Of State Senate Vote Is Shifted

Judge, Related to Victor, Orders Hearing Moved to Chesterfield.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 3.—The primary election contest suit filed in Spotsylvania County Circuit Court by H. H. Walton, of Louisa, defeated candidate for the State Senate, was ordered removed to Chesterfield County today by Judge Frederick W. Coleman, where it will be heard before Judge Edwin P. Cox.

Judge Coleman said he removed the case from his jurisdiction because of his relationship to S. Bernard Coleman, who defeated Walton for the Democratic nomination by 15 votes in the primary August 6. Judge Coleman is a second cousin of the nominee.

Notice was served on Judge Coleman yesterday that counsel for Walton would apply to the Supreme Court of Appeals at Staunton September 10 for a writ of prohibition to prevent him from sitting in the case.

Judge Coleman had previously refused to disqualify himself and ask for the appointment of another judge to try the case, as had been suggested by Walton's counsel. Today he decided it would be improper for him to decide the case.

Through his attorneys, former State Senator George Allen, of Richmond, and State Senator W. Worth Smith, jr., of Louisa, Walton brought action to have Coleman's nomination declared void, alleging that the primary was an "undue election" with "false returns." Irregularities in the voting and use of money and intoxicating liquors in Coleman's behalf were charged in the notice filed by Walton's counsel.

The charges were denied by Coleman's counsel, who termed them as "spurious" and "scurrilous."

Five in Race to Head West Virginia Legion

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairmont, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Five legionnaires are candidates to succeed Claude L. Smith, of Beckley, as department commander of the American Legion in West Virginia, which will close its seventeenth annual State convention here tomorrow at the end of a four-day program. The election will be held tomorrow.

The candidates are William G. Stathers, of Clarksburg; Irl E. Thomas, of Fairmont, general chairman of the convention; "Piggy" Poling, of Philippi; Albert Hoy, of St. Marys, and J. William Cummins, of Wheeling. Those "in the know" say Stathers has the best chance to win.

Lunchroom Employe Slugged in $24 Theft

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Dumfries, Va., Sept. 3.—Three unidentified men entered the Mook Lunch at Triangle early today, struck Buck Crawford, an employe, on the head with a bottle and took $24 from the cash register. Crawford was unconscious for one-half hour.

According to the story told T. H. Mooney, proprietor, the men had previously eaten breakfast at the lunchroom and had returned for cigarettes when Crawford was struck. Investigation was being made today by Sheriff John Kerlin.

August Leads Wet Months.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 3.—August has taken the lead in "wet" months thus far this year, according to official weather data compiled at Staunton Military Academy. Precipitation last month was 5.83 inches, compared with January, when the moisture was recorded as 4.78 inches. During August there were only seven clear days.

Budget Unit Hears Needs Of Hospitals

Peery and Advisers Go to Catawba and V.P.I. From Lynchburg.

$153,000 in Construction Recommended at Epileptic Colony.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 3.—Gov. Peery and members of his advisory committee on the budget today went to inspect the Catawba Sanatorium and Virginia Polytechnic Institute after spending the night at the State Colony for Epileptics, whose needs were presented to the official group last night by Dr. G. B. Arnold, superintendent.

In the party, which also inspected the Piedmont Sanatorium at Burkeville and Farmville State Teachers College yesterday, were Director of the Budget J. H. Bradford; Adolph Wagner, State mechanical engineer; Senators Aubrey Weaver, of Front Royal, Saxon Holt, of Newport News, and W. A. Garrett, of Ridgeway; and Delegates Ashton Dovell, of Williamsburg, Frank Moore, of Lexington, T. B. Stanley, of Henry County, and William Neff, of Abingdon.

Attend Aerial Show.

The party was presented to Lynchburg's public at a Labor Day aerial show at Preston Glenn Airport, and the Governor took the opportunity to compliment Fred W. McWane, Lynchburger, who was his Republican opponent for the governorship two years ago.

Members of the group then went by to visit Senator Carter Glass before coming on to the colony for epileptics and feeble-minded.

At an after-supper conference, Dr. Arnold recommended construction of a new $28,000 unit for tubercular patients and a modern $125,000 hospital to replace the dormitory now used for that purpose. The tubercular unit would care for approximately 50 patients, and the hospital would have room for 150 more than does the dormitory, the superintendent said.

350 Persons on Waiting List.

Because of lack of facilities, Dr. Arnold said, 350 persons are now on the institution's waiting list, having been placed there by legally appointed commissions. Many are to be sterilized.

In this connection, the superintendent said that more than 1,000 persons have been sterilized at the colony since 1927, with only one patient being lost.

Presbyterians Receive Candidate for Ministry

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 3.—West Hanover Presbytery yesterday received Charles H. Gibboney, of Roanoke, as a candidate for the ministry at a meeting at the Presbyterian Church.

Gibboney, 21, is a son of the late James H. Gibboney, of Roanoke, for years chief chemist for the Norfolk & Western Railway. He attended Sewanee University, in Tennessee, before coming to the University of Virginia, where he received a bachelor of arts degree in June. During the summer he has served as assistant pastor of the Charlottesville Presbyterian Church and was in charge of the mission work at Mayo's Chapel, in the county.

Driver Killed When Autos Hit Head-On

2 Injured in Crash on Curve of Highway in Maryland.

Victim Was on Wrong Side of Road, Says Witnesses.

Thomas Brewer, 38, of Hagerstown, Md., was injured fatally early yesterday morning when his auto collided head-on with another car 1 mile north of Clarksburg, Md., on the Frederick pike, at the intersection of Comus road.

The crash, which demolished both automobiles, seriously injured George Greaves, 51, and Mrs. Clara Seifert, a passenger in his car, both of Franklin, Pa.

Witnesses told police Brewer evidently was driving on the wrong side of the road when he rounded a curve. Brewer was a veteran of the World War, gassed overseas. He died a few hours after the crash in Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, Md., where the other injured also were taken.

Inquest Scheduled.

Greaves has several fractured ribs and may be injured internally, and Mrs. Seifert is shocked, cut and bruised.

An inquest will be held next Tuesday in Annapolis into the death of Miss Ida Schartner, 21, of 323 H street, Washington, victim of a Labor Day accident on the Defense highway.

Police Magistrate Joseph H. Armstrong, acting coroner, yesterday fixed the time for the inquest at 7 p. m.

Miss Schartner met death Monday night when the auto in which she was returning to Washington from Herald Harbor overturned between the Crain highway and the Bowie road after striking the car ahead of it.

Car Swerved Suddenly.

Investigating, State Patrolman J. C. Gates said he learned the other car, driven by Charles Crooks, colored, of Bowie, swerved to the left without warning.

Crooks was held at Hyattsville. Casper T. Fogle, of Clinton, driver of the car in which Miss Schartner was riding, was held in Annapolis.

He was injured slightly, as were Miss Schartner's sister, Miss Alma Schartner, and James M. McMichall, of Washington, other occupants of the automobile.

Hook and Line Lands 500-Lb. Sand Shark

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 3 (AP).—A 500-pound sand shark was caught on a hook and line here today and beached after an hour's struggle.

A large crowd gathered at the pier to see Frank Gaskin, Pete Harper and Dr. John Wintz-Stanley, of Philadelphia, haul the big fellow in. W. F. Brighton, of Baltimore, killed the shark with several rifle bullets. The 9½-footer was one of three sharks that had been feeding on kingfish off the pier for several days.

Gaskin said fishermen had been after the sharks for several days. They had hooked one of them before, but today was the first time the hook and line had held.

Fair Prices For Tobacco May Be Set

Growers From 9 States Are Represented at Parley Here.

By the Associated Press.

Possibilities that the Farm Administration would set "a fair exchange value" on burley, Maryland dark air-cured and fire-cured tobacco developed yesterday at a hearing here on a new four-year control program for these tobacco types.

Representatives of growers from Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia, North Carolina, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri heard department officials testify that prices under the present contracts, which expire this year for all but fire-cured tobacco, were below parity. They contended better safeguards against low prices should be included in the new contracts. Present contracts contain no fair exchange stipulation.

Minimum Price Suggested.

L. G. Minneman, agricultural research official, suggested a minimum price for these types to assure producers "a fair return under their contracts."

William Collins, acting tobacco chief, testified that the average 1934 burley price of $16.90 a hundred pounds was 60 cents below parity for that type, while the $18 average for Maryland tobacco was 10 cents below parity and the $7.60 a hundred for dark air-cured was $1.20 below parity.

Fire-Cured Above Parity.

Only fire-cured which averaged $10.80 a hundred was above parity, which for that type is $10.70.

The new contracts, Minneman said, probably will call for a 50 per cent reduction below the base acreage for burley, 40 per cent for fire and dark air-cured and 30 per cent for Maryland tobacco.

Only one benefit payment instead of three is contemplated for burley, fire and air-cured, he added, while it is proposed to continue the two-payment plan on Maryland tobacco.

Payments will be made on that portion of the crop sold for domestic consumption.

Crop Matures Early.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 3.—The tobacco crop in the Lynchburg district is being cut rapidly, the crop maturing earlier than usual because of early planting. Three-fourths of the crop has been cut in Charlotte and Appomattox counties but it is only half cut in Amherst, Bedford and Nelson counties. Indications are that the crop will be above average. Sales will open here November 12.

Giants Meet Reds, Then Pirates

St. Louis Plays 28 Tilts at Home, Confident of Boosting Lead.

Cubs' Road Also Is Easy; American's Nines Vie for Third Place.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Washed out all along the baseball front, the 16 major league teams were rolling eastward and westward tonight to begin the 1935 stretch drive.

National League teams, with three contenders promising a dog fight right down to the tape, begin long stands in the West. The scene of the rather one-sided race in the American League shifts to Eastern arenas.

Two of the National League favorites—St. Louis and Chicago—have a big advantage in their three-cornered duel with New York. For the next two weeks the Cardinals and Cubs perform in their own orchards, whereas the Giants must play their next 15 games in alien territory.

Giants at Cincinnati.

The Giants open a four-game set in Cincinnati tomorrow and then proceed to Pittsburgh for four jousts with the troublesome Pirates. From there they invade St. Louis for their final battles with the Cardinals, then wind up their last Western invasion with four games in Chicago.

At this time a year ago New York held a six-game lead, with the Cubs and Cardinals tied for second. Today finds the world champion Cards two games ahead of the Giants and two and a half games in front of the Cubs.

The Pirates apparently shot their pennant bolt when their fine winning streak snapped recently. They are now eight games behind the league-leading Cardinals, but still capable of throwing plenty of monkey wrenches into the well-laid plans of Messrs. Bill Terry, Charlie Grimm and "Farmer Frank" Frisch.

Game Home Stand.

Although their sparkplug, Pepper Martin, was injured in a night game at Cincinnati last Saturday, the Cardinals are confident their 25-game home stand will build up a lead that neither the Giants nor Cubs can menace.

Frisch's men, with nine straight games against the Braves and Phillies beginning tomorrow, hope to clean up at the expense of these clubs before taking on the Giants in a series that may just about clinch the pennant, on September 12.

Cubs Have Chance.

The Cubs have a chance to pick up some ground in 12 straight battles with the Phillies, Braves and Dodgers.

In the American League, with first and second places as good as in the bag for the Tigers and Yankees, there is a hot fight on among Cleveland, Chicago and Boston for third and fourth money.

Already nine games to the good, the Tigers expect to fatten their lead in five games with the Athletics, opening with a double bill tomorrow.

Nationals Open Series With Browns

Russell Due to See Mound Service Today in First Battle.

STILL haunted by the horrors of last place, which is only three and a half games to the rear, the Nats today will launch a campaign intended to put further distance between themselves and the St. Louis Browns.

The Browns are here for a four-game series. They threw a terrific scare into the Nats last week when they won five out of six games between the two clubs in St. Louis and at one point reduced the Nats' margin to a half game, but three victories over the Red Sox in their last four games have enabled Washington to climb to sixth.

Against the St. Louis club, which has been playing such polished ball of late that its percentage since the first half of the season is third only to the Tigers and Yankees, Manager Bucky Harris will send his latest pitching sensation—Jack Russell.

Shows Form Reversal.

Perilously close to a release to the minors after a string of dismal performances in relief roles, Russell has startled Harris with a complete reversal of form in his last two efforts and has made a successful bid for a regular turn.

After losing a 3-2 game to the Browns, Russell relieved Earl Whitehill in the first inning against the Red Sox last Saturday, shut out the Sox for ten innings and pitched the Nats to a 2-1 victory in 11. Harris was elated not only by Russell's triumph, but with his apparently new-found speed that had the Red Sox helpless.

During their current home stand, the Nats will meet every Western club. Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago will follow the Browns into Griffith Stadium.

Recent successes of the Chattanooga club, which is clinging to its chances to finish in the first division and thus figure in the Southern Association play-off, are delaying Griffith's plans to call several Chattanooga players to Washington for tryouts. Not until the Lookouts are definitely out of contention will Third Baseman Buddy Lewis, Pitcher Dick Lanahan and Outfielder Marion join the Nats.

Son Noses Out Father On 39th for Golf Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 3.—Carl K. Stonebraker, jr., is the golf champion of the Fountain Head Country Club for 1935. He won the title at the expense of his father, C. K. Stonebraker, sr., in one of the most brilliant matches ever witnessed at the local course. Finishing the 36 holes all square, father and son battled three additional holes before Young Stonebraker won the championship, 1 up, on the thirty-ninth hole.

In the second 16 in the club championship matches, it was the father who won this title, Fred C. Wright, sr., defeating Fred C. Wright, jr., 2 and 1, while G. S. Humphrey won the third 16 from George Orrick, 2 up.

Donkey Baseball Tilt Is Slated at Abingdon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Abingdon, Va., Sept. 3.—A donkey baseball game will be staged at Latture Field here Thursday night, under auspices of the Abingdon Baseball Club and Washington County American Legion Post, No. 12.

The game, to be called at 7:30 o'clock, will be the first outdoor night contest ever held in this town. Floodlights will be installed at the field tomorrow.

Warrenton Wanderers Win Over Midland, 4-3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 3.—In the only game played in the Fauquier County League yesterday, the Warrenton Wanderers nosed out Midland, 4 to 3, in ten innings.

Redd, pitching for Midland, struck out 13 men. Grayson and Childs pitched 5 innings each for the Wanderers. The game was played at Midland. Rain prevented the other three games.

U. S. Net Play Again Delayed By Rain

16 Matches Are Put Off; Tourney Likely to Go Into Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 3.—America's first combined men's, women's and veterans' national singles tennis championships are rapidly becoming a headache to officials.

For the second time since the three-ring circus under one top was started last Thursday the show was postponed on account of rain, making it impossible to hold the men's final before Sunday.

There's so much unfinished business that it is likely the tournaments will run into next week. It is the hope of the United States Lawn Tennis Association to put on the men's semifinals and the women's final Saturday, followed by the championship men's match Sunday. This is improbable, however, because the weather forecast for tomorrow calls for an all-day rain.

16 Matches Postponed.

Sixteen matches were on today's program which will be played tomorrow or on the next clear day. Three quarter-final brackets have been filled in the lower ha'' of the men's tournament with the other five to be decided by the following matches: (Lower half) Wilmer Allison vs. Gene Mako; (upper half) Donald Budge vs. John Van Ryn; Bryan M. Grant, jr., vs. Wilber Hess; Sidney B. Wood, jr., vs. John McDiarmid, and Roderich Menzel vs. Gregory S. Mangin. Thus, the match between defending champion Fred J. Perry and Frank X. Shields, who were to have played tomorrow, has been put over another day.

If the women's division three third-round matches remain in order to fill the eight quarter-final brackets they are down for play tomorrow with defending champion Helen Jacobs vs. Evelyn Dearman, England; Catherine Wolf vs. Mrs. Phyllis Mudford King, England, and Mrs. John Van Ryn vs. Evangeline McLennon.

Heavy Work For Louis To Start

Detroit Boxer Is Ready to Buckle Down to Severe Grind.

Baer Eases Off After 9 Ring Sessions at His Camp.

By the Associated Press.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Sept. 3.—After a week of rest, Joe Louis, the brown bomber from Detroit, will buckle down to the heavy training grind tomorrow in preparation for his September 24 battle with Max Baer.

The first day's schedule, as mapped out by Trainer Jack Blackburn, calls for 6 miles of road work in the morning and a busy session in the outdoor ring in the afternoon. Two sparring partners—Leonard Dixon of Philadelphia, and Roy Williams of Chicago—already are in camp. The veteran Larry Johnson, who lives only a few miles away, has volunteered to take some of Louis' punches if needed.

Speculator, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP).—Having completed nine boxing sessions since pitching camp here ten days ago to prepare for his battle for Joe Louis September 24, Max Baer took today off as far as his public training workouts were concerned. His only exercises consisted of a 5-mile road jaunt this morning and an hour of woodchopping.

When he resumes regular training tomorrow, the former heavyweight champion plans to increase his boxing to six rounds daily. To take care of the extra sessions Manager Ancil Hoffman is looking around for additional sparing partners. Yesterday Max battered all three of his men, Tony Cancela, Lou Scozza and Cecil Harrir, severely.

Fights Postponed Until Tomorrow

The program of fights scheduled at Griffith Stadium last night, headed by a six-round feature between Kirk Burk and Joe Lipps, was postponed following day-long rains and rescheduled for tomorrow night.

The entire card of 36 rounds of boxing, comprising six six-round bouts, will remain intact despite the postponement. All fighters weighed in yesterday and passed the physical examinations.

Task Difficult, Trojans Face Rebuilding

8 Regulars of '34 Gone; Sophs Counted On by Coach Jones.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 3.—Out of the wreckage of the 1934 season Coach Howard Jones will attempt to salvage and build a gridiron galleon this year that can successfully weather the stormiest football seas the University of Southern California ever faced.

Eight regulars and fifteen lettermen from that ill-fated team of a year ago, which slumped to the lowest level in years are gone, but few of them will be missed.

The task ahead is a difficult one, but Troy's head man of football thinks there is a possibility of rebuilding in a year. At least he is going to try by hurling sophomore strength into the all-important end and half-back positions, not to mention running guard.

Sophomore Ends.

Bill Gaisford and Charles Williams, two able freshmen performers last year, will be given first call at the wing positions which were so weak a year ago. A Florida youth, Mason Rose, and Jack Clark, of Arizona, stand out at right half, while Owen Hansen, a shot putter by trade who had no high school experience, is favored to get the call at left half.

Raphael Brosseau, fast, rugged sophomore, will attempt to lead the interference at left guard, where such stars as Johnny Baker, Nate Barrager and Aaron Rosenberg once paved the way.

But there will be sufficient veteran material for stability. Coach Jones intends to give two fairly successful tackles of 1934, Bruce Hull and Elwood Jorgensen, a chance at these positions again and feels that Bob Sanders will do at right guard. Gil Kuhn will be back at center.

"Out Fishin'" ∫ ∫

By Jack Hawley.

IF the authorities in control of the operations of salt water patrol boats for the States of Maryland and Virginia fail to take immediate steps to prevent further unethical as well as illegal fishing operations on Northwest and Southwest Middles and vicinity, both States may have to answer for the death of one or more innocent anglers, male and female, who are legally using these famous bluefishing grounds.

This writer has received nine personal complaints from angles who have suffered from the despicable actions of Virginia boatmen who until this year had seldom, if ever, used the Middles for their fishing parties. The complaints were as follows: Boats running full speed off the stern of trolling boats, close enough to cut all lines, causing the loss of both expensive lures and many yards of high priced lines; running their "chum streams;" illegal use of the nets, while hauled in hundreds of large bluefish, and abusive and unprintable language when protest was made by an angler.

Your correspondent watched a fast boat cut the trolling lines of Sydney Lust and Burnett Baer while fishing with Capt. Tippett. Protest was made, to no avail. We watched the process repeated to others. However, we did secure a picture of a boat which will be used as part of evidence piling up daily against these selfish and illegal netters. Mr. L. L. Cobb, of Georgetown University, in company with Capt. J. L. Lake and Dr. John Bowers, secretary and treasurer of Georgetown University, also had their lines deliberately cut off while trolling with Capt. Brady McKay, of Ridge, Md. Here is report:

"Boat No. 7146 unable to get its nets down around a school of bluefish because of the clever manipulation of Capt. McKay's coat. Boats Nos. 5857-T and N-1703 both were successful in encircling bluefish illegally and hauled in large quantities. No. 7146 is from Smiths Island. State authorities check these boat numbers.

Two boats, both carrying illegal nets on the stern, were sighted off Holland Light on Monday morning by this writer, but made their exit before picture could be taken for identification. A few Maryland boatmen have been recently threatened by Virginia boatmen and firearms shown to enforce their illegal netting. This writer has been advised from reliable quarters that boats out of St. Jeromes Creek and Point Lookout can not fish, oyster or crab in Virginia waters because of fear of bodily harm and firearms. Maryland fishermen do not object to competitors using Maryland waters (Northwest and Southwest Middles), providing common decency is accorded them and their parties, whom they depend upon for their living.

It is interesting to note that prior to your correspondent's large catch of bluefish near Holland Light, not one commercial netter (illegal) was using that locality. However, word was sent out late Sunday night that tremendous schools of blues were sighted by our party the day previous. The netters were on the grounds bright and early Monday morning, ready to take all the blues if necessary.

Boats from Reedsville, Va., and other points on the Virginia side have not until this year used the "Middles" for their operations and realizing the tremendous schools of blues that are feeding on these grounds have set out to monopolize and control the best fishing grounds (blues) in the Chesapeake, and the authorities continue to wink at each other.

If Maryland and Virginia would realize the amount of revenue derived from fishing in their respective waters, the least they might do is to see that those who are drawing enforcement salaries should either be removed immediately from office or made to earn what the States are paying them for—patroling their respective waters.

Reports received for last Saturday and Sunday are excellent. Monday was a complete failure for all fishermen, strong northeast winds prevailing during the day.

Commission Hears Date Wrangle

Ring Solons Promise to Make a Decision Public Today.

Legion Battles Turner for Right to Present Monday Bouts.

THE District Boxing Commission calmly heard rival Washington promoters and matchmakers wrangle for two hours yesterday over the question of the assignment of fight dates and then sidestepped a decision for 24 hours. No intimation of the commission's stand was given in its announcement that it would hand down a decision today.

With Kenneth N. Parkinson sitting in at his first meeting as a member of the commission, which earlier in the day had elected Fred Buchholz as chairman to succed the late Maj. Lucien Vandoren, the boxing chiefs took under advisement the petition of the American Legion for a share of the Monday night dates here now held by Promoter Joe Turner.

The legion's arguments were presented by Matchmaker Howard Livingston and Frank Peckham and Joe Malloy, legion officials. Turner, flanked by his voluble matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn, pleaded his own case.

Suggestion Is Rejected.

Turner and Ahearn rejected the informal suggestion of the commission that they yield alternate Monday night dates to the legion, pointing out the promotorial failures of that group in recent boxing and wrestling ventures.

Calling Monday nights the choice boxing dates, the legion representatives declared that Turner was enjoying a virtual monopoly on boxing promotion in the District despite the presence of other qualified and licensed promoters in the field. The legion, they said, was willing to share alternate Monday nights with Turner.

In rebuttal, Turner declared that his long presence in the promotorial field here and his successful promotions which had contributed more to the District commission treasury than the efforts of all other promoters combined, gave him an equity in Monday night assignments.

Two Policies Open.

The Commissioners will found their decision, it was indicated, on one of two policies to be decided:

Whether boxing here will best be served by competition between promoters operating two nights a week; or Whether boxing here will best be served by the elimination of one of the proposed two weekly fight cards.

Both Turner and Livingston declared that they welcomed competition and that they would not be averse to a decree of the "survival of the fittest" if the boxing commission so ruled, but both reaffirmed their intention to seek regular Monday night dates.

Turner, His Plane Imperiled, Braves Smoke, Saves Life But Loses Race—Offers No Alibi

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 3.—The famous Thompson Trophy race for land speed planes had been a great bore for eight of the ten laps, with Col. Roscoe Turner in his golden Wedell-Wiliams leading a parade of assorted airplanes from little clipped-wing racers to the amazing Seversky stock job amphibian, and maintaining a seven or eight-mile lead.

Suddenly, upon rounding the No. 4 pylon, and flattening out to fly past the grandstand, his plane gave forth a great puff of coal black smoke. The crowd let out a groan, and Turner pulled the ship right straight up into the air so that you could see its golden belly. The tin voice of the P. A. system yelled, "Roscoe Turner is pulling up out of the race. Turner is in trouble . . ."

Up and up went Turner, fighting for the airman's salvation—altitude. They fly that Thompson race from 50 to 250 feet above the ground. Turner was at the latter height when apparently an oil lead gave way. At the top of his climb he went over in a chandel turn, the black smoke had given way to a trail of white vapor as thick as his fuselage. Turner was writing his battle to save his ship and himself on the sky in big, thick, bold loops and swirls of yellow-white smoke.

It was a magnificently dramatic shock because at the very instant Turner began his struggle to live, and if possible save his investment at the same time, two grand kids, hopelessly second, burst into the money—Harold Neuman, flying Benny Howard's cream-white cabin ship, winner of the Bendix Trophy, and Mr. Mulligan. Mr. Mulligan got off to a bad start. The ship had been on the starting line for more than 20 minutes with the engine idling. Those high-speed engines won't stand much idling or taxiing, they need the breeze created by 200 miles an hour to cool off.

Seven ships roared over the ground at the starter's bomb, and Mr. Mulligan took off like your maiden aunt trying to jump over a puddle. One turn around the scattering pylon and it was in last place. Turner, in his fast Hornet powered ship, took the lead immediately and was never headed. It was probable that Mr. Mullian's plugs were fouled.

Harold Neuman, a kid racing pilot, was flying for Howard. Benny used to be a racing pilot, but United Air Lines, for whom he flies on the regular New York run, made him stop. Nervous old ladies seeing the name Benjamin O. Howard on the name-plate at the front of the cabin might not like it. Benny has a great gift for designing as well as flying speed aircraft. His are the famous little white grasshoppers, Mike and Ike, to which has been added Pete. Howard, or a Howard ship, won all three of the big air race trophies this year—the Bendix, the Grieve and the Thompson. He was allowed to fly Mr. Mulligan across country in the Bendix race from California.

Anyway, there was the gleaming Turner far, far out in front, golden his ship, blue his tunic, sparkling the diamonds in the wings on his breast, and victory in his grasp. And then it happened, right smack in front of the stands.

If it had occurred far in the back stretch of the 15-mile quadrangular course I might have been writing Turner's obit today. Those racing ships kill you quickly. You can't land them in a field. Your only hope is to get yourself a couple of thousand feet, or even a thousand, and bail out. A little break in an oil line. The hare was done for. The tortoise became the winner.

Roscoe Turner is a man you could very easily dislike on first sight. The shiny boots, the waxed mustache, the musical comedy get-up, all are liable to prejudice one against a great flier, and one of the most graceful losers I have ever seen. He yanked his smoking ship around and away from the field, pouring smoke—we couldn't tell whether he was afire or not—made one turn, and shot the field.

He came in a-pouring, snicked the switch, bounced once, hung, hit at terrific speed and then was safe, rolling along the ground, the red fire wagon coming along at an angle to meet him. Always the perfect showman and dramatist, whether this time by intent or accident, he brought his dead, fuming ship to a stop, his wheels exactly touching the white chalk line in front of the grandstand, an absolute perfect spot landing, the prettiest one made in the whole show.

The sides and tail of the golden ship were black with oil. Turner's face was streaked with smoke and grease. But his boots and his tunic were immaculate. He climbed out of the ship and walked toward the stands. The crowd gave him a roar of welcome. Smiling, he raised both arms to the audience as though embracing them. I watched him through field glasses, in the center of a swirl of questioners. He never lost his smile. Over the microphone he said, "I have had sympathy extended to me because of what was called hard luck. I haven't had hard luck. I've had good luck. Any man who can walk away from something like that has the best luck in the world. I'm very happy." To no one did he offer a single word of alibi.

Postscript, $7.40, Wins at Narragansett by Half a Length

4-Year-Old Near Track Record

Blackmail Runs Second; Daily Double Returns $36.20 Mutuel.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Sept. 3.—The Jersey Stable's Postscript, in the money in seven of her last eight starts, won the fifth race here today, a mile and 70 yards for 3-year-olds and upward, by running the distance within one-fifth of a second of the track record.

Finishing half a length in front of Mrs. J. Chesney's Blackmail, the 4-year-old daughter of Polymelian was timed in 1:42 3-5 for the distance. She did not take the lead until turning for home, letting first Kieva and then Blackmail set the early pace.

Pays $7.40 Mutuel.

Postscript paid $7.40, $4.30 and $2.80, Blackmail returned $11.90 and $4.30 and Kieva paid $2.60.

The start of the third race was delayed 22 minutes, first by the discovery that Admiral Cary T. Grayson's Onward, original choice of the bettors, had received a badly twisted knee in a warm-up run just before being saddled, Onward was scratched.

Rider Is Thrown.

Then Staked Plains threw his rider while going from the paddock to the track and another jockey had to be found. No one was anxious to go up on the fractious steed, but finally Clarence Reid volunteered and went to the post on the horse, which acted like a rodeo performer all the way.

Reid was thrown twice, but stuck to his task and rode the horse through the race. The Racing Association gave him a $25 bonus.

The daily double today paid $36.20, with Epsom Prince winning the first and Befitting the third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EPSOM PRINCE, $8.40, $5.30, $3.70; SUN ASIA, $17.50, $10.60; FAR AND FAST, $4.30.

EPSOM PRINCE forced the pace of GOLD CLIP, wore the latter down when passing the furlong pole and, hard ridden, held SUN ASIA safe. The latter, restrained early, came stoutly on the outside through the stretch. FAR AND FAST, never far from the leaders, continued willingly. SILAS, away slowly, saved ground. GOLD CLIP had good early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:13. Winner, Mrs. D. Melanson's ch. m. (5), by Happy Argo—Knot. Trained by G. Mayberry. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:23, 0:46 3-5, 1:12.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
HAPPY KNOT	103	6	2	1½	1nk	1h	1h	Deering	$2.55

SPEEDMORE	111	1	7	7h	8nk	8½	6½	Wagner	9.70
ONE CHANCE	110	3	4	5½	7	7	7	C. Hanford	59.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY KNOT, $7.10, $4.40, $2.70; WEE WINK, $5.60, $3.20; GLYNDON BELLE, $2.80.

HAPPY KNOT showed speed from the start, forced to the front at the close of the initial furlong, disposed of IMA COUNT and, holding on in courageous fashion, held WEE WINK safe. The latter, restrained early until rounding the far turn, moved up fast when reaching the stretch, but was unable to overtake the winner. GLYNDON BELLE, under light reserve early, was unable to reach the leaders. JOHNS BIRTHDAY was never a factor. IMA COUNT showed good early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 4:01. Winner, Mrs. J. A. Coburn's ch. f. (3), by Royal Count—Informal. Trained by J. J. Barker. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:24, 0:47, 1:13 1-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

STAKED PLAINS	111	5	8	8	8	8	8	Reid	13.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEFITTING, $5.70, $2.70, $2.50; GINGER HACKLE, $2.70, $2.50; PRIETA, $3.30.

BEFITTING, never far from the pace and restrained early, moved up on the outside going around the far turn, moved up fast on the outside, straightened out in the stretch, wore down GINGER HACKLE and drew out in the last sixteenth. GINGER HACKLE drew away into a good lead, but was unable to keep pace with the winner in the closing drive. PRIETA, unable to keep pace early, closed with a rush. CLEAN SPORT moved up nearing the stretch, but was unable to improve his position. MISS WILFULL had brief early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Warwick Purse. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:30. Off at once. Winner, P. S. Pare's b. c. (2), by St. James—Black Bush. Trained by C. H. Strate. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:45 4-5, 1:05 3-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
JAMES CITY	110	5	2	1½	1½	1½	1½	Hunter	$4.55
HOLLYROOD	115	6	1	3½	2½	2h	2h	Haines	1.05

JACK SNIPE	110	2	5	5nk	5h	5½	5h	Seabo	12.00
FIRST BID	107	3	6	6	6	6	6	Wagner	25.15

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES CITY, $11.10, $4.50, $3.00; HOLLYROOD, $3.00, $2.40; STE. LOUISE, $2.50.

JAMES CITY, hustled to the front in the opening strides, drew clear in the first three-sixteenths, was steadied along in front and held HOLLYROOD safe. The latter, away well, dropped back slightly, was under punishment in the early stages, moved up gamely on the outside and, continuing gamely, was unable to reach the leader. STE. LOUISE, in nearest pursuit of the leader early, was unable to keep pace with the first two in the closing drive. RICH STRIKE was stopped.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:55½. Winner, Jersey Stable's ch. f. (4), by Polymelian—Escret. Trained by H. Trotter. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:38, 1:42 3-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
POSTSCRIPT	104	4	3	3h	2½	1nk	1½	1h	L. Hanford	$2.70

MIDSHIPMAN	111	8	6	6h	6½	8	8	8	Saunders	21.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POSTSCRIPT, $7.40, $4.30, $2.80; BLACKMAIL, $11.90, $4.30; KIEVA, $4.60.

POSTSCRIPT was restrained within striking distance of the pace, moved up on the outside leaving the back stretch, wore down BLACKMAIL for the command and held sway to the end. BLACKMAIL was given a breathing spell when passed by the winner and came again at the end. KIEVA, under steadying restraint early, came through on the inside in the stretch, fought it out courageously, but faltered in the last 70 yards. PROPAGANDIST closed some ground. MAD PRUMP ran well placed.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:24. Off at 5:24½. Winner, W. Elliott's ch. m. (5), by Chatterton—Merry Princess. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13, 1:39, 1:46 1-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

MARMION	108	5	5	6nk	6½	5nk	8	9	Howell	6.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—XANDRA, $6.70, $3.90, $2.90; CHRYSMUTE, $10.20, $5.60; HOKUOA, $4.10.

XANDRA, outrun until reaching the far turn, moved up steadily thereafter, came through on the inside at the stretch turn, wore down CHRYSMUTE after passing the furlong pole and, driving, drew out at the end. CHRYSMUTE forced out to the center of the course, was in front when SHOT AND SHELL began tiring and, despite holding on well, was unable to stave off the bid of the winner. HOKUOA, away well, dropped back. MANAGER BILL went wide at the first turn and raced far back. MARMION was never prominent.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:52. Off at 5:53½. Winner, Mrs. F. Coltiletti's b. c. (3), by Swift—Sure Sure Day. Trained by F. P. Coltiletti. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 1-5, 1:44.

FLIPPERINO	110	4	8	3h	3h	7h	7h	8	Garner	2.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOJO, $7.40, $3.60, $3.20; TRANSPARENT, $5.40, $3.90; COURT GOSSIP, $4.80.

DOJO, in hand for the first half-mile, moved up stoutly leaving the back stretch, went into command with a rush and drew out through the last three-sixteenths. TRANSPARENT, restrained early, came stoutly in the closing quarter-mile. COURT GOSSIP, outpaced early, was taken to the outside and closed gamely. CHATTERESS forced the early pace, but faltered. YANKEE PRINCE showed good speed in pace-making. FLIPPERINO stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:24. Off at 6:25. Winner, P. I. Randolph's b. g. (5), by Sun Flag—Dutchess—Kathleen. Trained by J. Pets. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:24, 0:47 4-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREE, $24.80, $9.10, $4.20; WINGED FLIGHT, $7.70, $3.70; BARRY, $2.70.

FREE moved up steadily on the outside when straightened out on the back stretch, went to the front after rounding the far turn, withstood determined opposition from WINGED FLIGHT at the furlong pole and held him safe at the end. WINGED FLIGHT worked his way up steadily and loomed up threateningly at the furlong pole, but was not good enough for the winner. BARRY went to the first flight well, but was much used in racing with the winner. SUN ERIN ran well placed. TRUE CHARM was never a factor.

Trade Recovery Is Held Remedy For Tax Burden

Necessity of Drastic Levy Would Fade With Rise, Says Study.

New York, Sept. 3.—"Recovery would solve the financial difficulties of the Federal Government without the necessity for drastic increases in the burden of taxation," according to a report on "Federal finances in the fiscal year 1935" issued today by the National Industrial Conference Board.

"All measures that tend to impede recovery in production and trade prevent reduction of relief expenditures and increase of revenue," the report continues. "Without recovery the budget can be balanced only by the imposition of taxes which in the end would defeat their aim by drying up the sources of revenue and decreasing the income of the Government."

While the trend in revenues is definitely upward, it is improbable, according to the conference board's study, that a balance will be achieved at or near present levels of expenditures by increased income. Reduction of expenditures for "recovery and relief," combined with increasing revenues, it is stated, offers the only practicable solution. If relief expenditures are reduced to about $1,000,000,000 for the fiscal year 1927 and revenues from existing sources continue to improve as they have during the past two years, it should be possible to draw up a budget showing a complete balance, except for public debt retirements. If such a budget should be announced in January, 1936, the report states, it would be the most constructive development in the Federal fiscal picture in the whole depression period.

How Recovery Would Aid.

How this could be brought about is explained in the conference board's study as follows:

With general expenditures for 1937 at the same level as for 1935, additional receipts of 347.7 million over and above the 1935 level would have to be obtained to balance a budget that would include recovery and relief expenditures of $1,000,000,000. In other words, a 9 per cent improvement or increase in receipts would be necessary. The increase in 1935 over 1934 was 22 per cent. If recovery and relief expenditures are placed at $1,500,000,000, additional revenues of 847.7 million, or 22 per cent more than actual receipts for 1935, would be required. It is not unreasonable to expect an increase of 22 per cent in receipts from 1935 to 1937. On the contrary, a two-year gain exactly equal on a percentage basis to the improvement in 1935 over 1934 could be conservatively expected in the event of continued business recovery.

Steel Mill Activity Slackens to 45.8%

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute estimates steel production during the current week at 45.8 per cent of capacity compared with 47.9 per cent in the preceding week. A month ago operations were 46 per cent of capacity. The current figure represents a decline of 2.1 points, or 4.4 per cent from the preceding week. This is the largest drop since the week of July 1, when operations declined 4.9 per cent.

Two Big Banks Cut Dividends; One Adds Extra

Hanover and Bankers Trust Reduce; Marine Midland Increases.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 3.—Prices of New York City bank stocks declined sharply today following the reduction in dividends by the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. and and the Bankers Trust Co.

Central Hanover clipped the quarterly dividend from $1.50 to $1 on its capital shares. Closing quotations for the stock, at $105 bid, 109 asked, showed a decline of $19.50 a share. Bankers Trust stock dropped $5 a share to close at $64.50 bid, $66.50 asked, following the reduction of the quarterly dividends from 75 cents quarterly to 50 cents.

The dividend reduction by Central Hanover, one of the largest trust companies in the United States, took the bank stock market by surprise and brought selling into other bank shares with net losses of from $1 to $8.

Guarty Trust closed at $289, a net loss of $5 a share; Manufacturers Trust was down $2 a share at $31.50, while New York Trust slumped $8 a share to $110 bid. First National, the highest priced stock in the over-the-counter market, dropped $75 a share to $1,730 bid, $1,770 asked.

An extra dividend of 15 cents a share was voted today by directors of Marine Midland Trust Co. This was in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents. More than 99 per cent of the stock of this bank is owned by Marine Midland Corporation, shares of which closed on the Stock Exchange at $7,87, off 12 cents.

U. S. Grain Supplies.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat increased 4,502,000, corn decreased 293,000, oats increased 5,517,000, rye decreased 30,000; barley increased 990,000.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Tues.	Sat.
Advances	165	317
Declines	382	101
Unchanged	150	133
Total issues	697	551

Stocks—Price trends were mildly reactionary as traders returned for their first post holiday session. Caution was the keynote. Volume tended to increase as the market showed occasional evidences of strength. Turnover was up to 903,789 shares.

Bonds—A sinking spell in the Federal list was the feature. Early reports showed little enthusiasm for the terms of the Treasury conversion of the Liberty Fourth 4¼s. The market showed renewed interest in these issues. Foreign loans were steady. Transfers aggregated $9,151,000.

Curb—Prices were generally lower. A. & P. stores dropped 2 points. The turnover was slightly lower with transfers of approximately 170,000 shares.

Grains—Reflecting uncertainty among traders, wheat pressure went up a cent a bushel but lost the gain in later sales. September wheat closed at 87½, September corn at 71½, and September oats at 23¾.

Cotton—Prices sagged under scattered hedging and liquidation. Closings were 2 to 8 points lower with October at 10.29.

Sugar—Raw sugar unchanged at 3.45. Refined also unchanged at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Santos No. 4 last at 8¼ and Rio No. 7 final at 6½.

Bar silver—Unchanged in New York at 65⅜ cents per ounce. London prices were up ¼d to 29¼d (65.33 cents).

Bar gold—Unchanged in London at 140 shillings 3d ($34.77).

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Wall Street Reaction to New Big Government Financing Is Normal; Stock Movement Sluggish and Price Trend Lower.

Copyright, 1935, by United Press.

Nw York, Sept. 3.—The Government's $1,750,000,000 financing operation attracted chief Wall Street attention tonight in view of the sluggish stock market.

The financing, consisting of 2¾ per cent bonds maturing 1945-1947 and 3½-year 1½ per cent notes, will complete conversion of the outstanding Fourth Liberty Loan 4¼s of which $1,250,000,000 now are outstanding. In addition the Government will seek $500,000,000 additional through sale of the notes.

Wall Street's first reaction was norma. The listed 4¼s on the stock exchange droped 10-32ds of a point to 100.3 after touching a 1935 low of 100.22 in earlier dealings. This contrasted with a high of 104.16 earlier this year. The price likely will pick up later as banks and institutions step in to fill requirements to exchange for new notes.

Close to Market.

In private quarters there were mixed opinions on the new bonds. Some believed the Government establishing a new record low interest rate had pared the market a trifle too close. While the refunding will be successful, it was pointed out that the Government bond list already is beginning to feel the strain of additional loans. Other observers believed the Government would maintain the bond market at o good position to insure success of the refunding operations.

The note rate and offering was considered favorable. The rate, bankers felt, was about correct in relation to the market. The loans are of short maturity, a ytpe of offering meeting good demand now, and should meet quick reception and oversubscription. Some quarters believed subscription allotments for these lons would be 20 to 30 per cent, while conversion into the longer term loans and notes would necessitate some time.

In addition, Wall street found another interesting factor in the movement of the Government to obtain $500,000,000 additional cash. The street saw in this move an attempt to accelerate various of the Government relief and recovery spending projects which might bring some pick-up in certain industrial lines.

Plethora of Funds.

Meanwhile, avalanche of funds in banks continued to attract comment. It is far from a healthy condition, despite the enormous credit background potentialities such reserves provide. Some of these funds are drifting into securities, but not sufficiently. Borrowing is at a minimum. Money rates are slow and the market sluggish.

Coinciding with this interest in funds was announcement that the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. and the Bankers Trust Co. had reduced interest rates. The former dropped its payment from $1.50 per quarter to $1 per quarter, and the latter from 75 cents to 50 cents per share. This brought a break in bank stocks in the over-the-counter market, losses ranging to 75 cents.

In addition to lack of borrowings, additional expenses imposed by the banking act, such as deposit insurance charges, are mentioned as causes of lighter bank earnings.

While these points were attracting interest, the stock market moved dully through a 900,000-share session with stock fractions to a point lower. Utilities dropped as New York City planned a referendum on a municipal power plant. Steel shares reflected a drop of 2.1 points to 45.8 per cent of capacity in operations as announced by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The "Street" today talked about: L. A. Young Spring & Wire declaration of a 50-cent-per-quarter regular dividend against 25 cents regular and 25 cents extra previously . . . Canadian interests reportedly buying International Nickel . . . Increasing business in U. S. Gypsum as the company's operations increase . . . Crosley Radio sales increasing . . . American Cynamid likely to show $1.25 a share earnings for the year . . . Possibility of du Pont's earnings reaching $4.50 a share for the year . . . Armstrong Cork earnings likely to exceed $1.70 a share.

Canada Newsprint Exports Increase

Montreal, Sept. 3.—Probability of a steadily increasing overseas demand for Canadian newsprint is suggested in the September letter of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Newsprint exports to countries other than the United States were 6 per cent of Canadian production in 1927, but amounted to 18 per cent of the increased 1934 production. In 1932, Canadian newsprint production was 1,914,000 tons and in 1934 it increased to 2,599,000 tons, one-third of the increase being sold in overseas markets.

Scandinavian and Newfoundland output of newsprint, says the letter, seems to be approaching the maximum which can be produced economically. Unless newsprint prices rule higher, proposals for increased United States production by developing mills in Oregon or Alaska or by a new Southern pine process seem improbable because of the large investment necessary.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 3 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—A moderate tapering off in trade in the Boston wool market was noted at the end of last week, but this was considered largely a result of holiday influences. The August sales were of the largest volums since May. Trade in the past two weeks brought about a general stiffening in quotations on domestic wools, and at the opening of September a number of grades were quoted higher than a month ago.

D. C. Building Leads Entire Fifth District

Aggregate of $2,019,050 Is Licensed Here in July.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

New building construction licensed in Washington during July aggregated $2,019,050 to lead all cities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, the Reserve Bank in Richmond reported last night.

Local permits made up nearly half the total $4,595,636 contracted for in the entire Fifth District which comprises the States of Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina and Maryland.

Value of the construction licensed here was nearly three times as great as that reported by the second place city, Baltimore, where $794,280 in new buildings were licensed. Charleston, W. Va., was in third place with $247,278, and Portsmouth, Va., next on a planned total of $200,762.

Building permits issued in 31 leading cities of the Fifth District during July numbered 2,448 compared with 1,787 permits issued in July 1934, an increase of 37 per cent.

Estimated valuation figures for all classes of permits issued totaled $4,595,636, compared with a valuation of $2,310,659 in the same month of 1934, a gain of 98.9 per cent.

Retail trade of Washington stores continued the rapid pace that has been set during the earlier months of the year, scoring the greatest gain of any city in the district.

Sales in local stores during the month were 27.2 per cent above the same month of 1934, while the average for the entire district was 16.1 per cent higher. Baltimore reported 8.4 per cent higher sales, while Richmond was 10.4 per cent ahead of last year.

The tobacco crop in the whole Fifth District this year is estimated at 704,073,000 pounds, on the basis of the August 1 condition, an increase of 21.4 per cent over 1934 production of 580,183,000 pounds. The August 1 condition of tobacco was much higher in all Fifth District States than a year earlier.

General crops in the district were better than they were a year ago, on the whole, and also above the ten-year average in condition.

Cotton Market Drifts Lower

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 3.—Cotton was quiet today with prices sagging off a few points under scattered hedging and liquidation. December sold off from 10.37 to 10.30, closing at that figure, with the general market steady at net declines of 2 to 8 points.

Postal-Western Union Merger Plan Denied

New York, Sept. 3.—A recommendation to bondholders of Postal Telegraph & Cable Corporation by Cecil P. Stewart, head of a protective committee, that a merger with Western Union Telegraph Co. would be preferable to a Postal reorganization, was met today with a vigorous denial by Postal officials that they had proposed any reorganization plan.

Daily Oil Output Declines in Week

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 23,600 barrels in the week ended August 31, totaling 2,665,100 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Imports of crude and refined oils at principal United States ports totaled 601,000 barrels, a daily average of 85,857 barrels, against 526,000 barrels, a daily average of 75,143 barrels for the previous week.

Wheat Moves Up Then Down a Cent

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—Wheat prices went up a cent a bushel and then back down again today as the market reflected a feeling of uncertainty and nervousness among traders.

Acting as a drag on wheat was extreme weakness in the new crop corn futures, which declined more than a cent. Bullish world wheat news, featuring smaller world's shipments and continued moisture dearth in sections of Argentina and Australia, was virtually ignored.

At the close wheat was ⅝ lower to ⅛ higher, compared with Saturday's finish, December 89⅛-89¾, and corn was ⅜ to 1⅝ off, December 56-56½. Oats lost ⅝-⅞, rye 1⅛-1⅜, and barley was unchanged.

Shipbuilding Gains.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—On August 1, American shipyards were building or had under contract to build for private ship owners 60 vessels aggregating 30,686 gross tons, compared with 49 vessels aggregating 20,292 tons on July 1, according to reports compiled by shipping interests for Government bureaus.

Street Expects Railroad Fares To Be Reduced

Rate of 3.6 Cents a Mile Survives Only in Eastern Area.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 3.—A new deal in railroad passenger rates in the Eastern territory is regarded in Wall street quarters as virtually certain of development this year despite the noncommittal attitude of the railroad managers.

In this region alone the 3.6-cent-a-mile tariff survives. It has been discarded by the Western roads and by most of the carriers in the Southeastern territory. As some observers have put it, it is one of an infinitesimal number of things in the price realm which were not touched by the deflationary trend of the last six years.

For a matter of two years or more the managers of the roads east of the Mississippi have at intervals talked behind closed doors on the advisability of discarding the old base tariff in favor of a rate more in harmony with the present-day transportation purchasing limits of the public.

Big Roads Lukewarm.

They are said to have lined up on both sides of the question, with the principal passenger-carrying lines holding out for maintenance of the old rate. In this connection, such roads as the Pennsylvania, New York Central and New Haven have been mentioned as least in favor of a change. Baltimore & Ohio and some of the smaller systems have been represented as favoring a lower base rate.

While the commission in the past has not in every instance adopted the recommendations of its examiners in the matter of rate changes, its action in this particular case is likely to be an indorsement of its inquisitor's findings.

The Economical, Convenient Way to Borrow Money

ACACIA REAL ESTATE LOANS

No Commissions or Other Charges except title expense and small appraisal fee

A Definite Monthly Payment

A Definite Payment Date

A Definite Time of Maturity

ACACIA offers three plans: One, at the rate of $6.15 monthly per $1,000, paid up in 25 years; another at $6.90 monthly per $1,000, paid up in 19 years and 11 months; and a third at $8 monthly per $1,000, paid up in 15½ years.

For example: On a $4,000 loan you pay $24.60; or $27.60; or $32 per month, according to the plan decided upon. You also have the special privilege of making larger payments or paying off your loan completely at any time.

Under these money-saving plans you pay back a little of the loan each month, and interest only on the outstanding principal, so that after a time the loan is all paid and you do not owe a cent. Be sure to ask Acacia about this feature.

Acacia loans are available to owners of satisfactorily located properties in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia. The $6.15 per $1,000 plan is available only on new properties or properties recently completed.

Curb Reactionary In Narrow Range

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 3.—Mild reactionary tendencies developed on the curb market today. Transfers approximated 179,000 shares compared with 181,000 last Friday.

Great Atlantic & Pacific dipped 8 points on a small offering. Among the power group, Electric Bond & Share yielded a point to 12⅞. Fractional declines were recorded by shares of American Gas & Electric, Niagara Hudson Power, American Cyanamid "B," Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hiram Walker and Newmont Mining.

Sunshine Mining and Wright Hargreaves finished slightly higher.

Foreign Exchange.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—The dollar continued to gain against the pound sterling in world foreign exchange trading today and also against the French franc, but some of the other gold currencies firmed.

The British unit declined ¼ of a cent in New York at $4.96⅞, following an earlier advance in the dollar in London to $4.96⅝ to the pound.

French francs lost .00⅛ of a cent in the American market at 6.59⅛ cents. Earlier in Paris the American currency was firm at the equivalent of 6.596 cents to the franc.

Guilders rose .03 of a cent in New York at 67.07 cents, while Swiss francs improved .01 of a cent at 32.40 cents. Lire were up .01 of a cent at 8.16 cents.

PROPOSALS

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, PROCUREMENT Division, Public Works Branch, Washington, D. C., Aug. 28, 1935.—Sealed proposals in duplicate will be publicly opened in this office at 10 a. m., Sept. 25, 1935, for furnishing all labor and materials and performing all work for installing apparatus for high pressure steam service to Bureau of Engraving and Dept. of Agri. from Central Heating Plant, Washington, D. C. Attention is directed to the special conditions of bidding set forth in the specification. Drawings and specifications will be supplied free to each contractor interested in submitting a proposal. The above drawings and specifications MUST be returned to this office. Specifications and drawings (if any) will not be furnished to contractors who have consistently failed to submit proposals. One set upon request, and may be considered, in the interests of the Government, will be furnished builders' exchanges, chambers of commerce or other organizations who will guarantee to make them available for any subcontractor or material firm interested, and to quantity surveyors, but this privilege will be withdrawn if the sets are not returned after they have accomplished their purpose. TRUSTEE'S SALE OF THE VALUABLE EIGHT-STOREY AND BASEMENT BRICK, STUCCO AND HOLLOW TILE APARTMENT HOUSE KNOWN AS "CAVALIER HOTEL," LOCATED AT 3500 FOURTEENTH STREET NORTHWEST.

Because of default in the terms and conditions of, and by virtue of a certain deed of trust executed by the Hilltop Manor Co., a Delaware corporation, dated April 23, 1926, recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia, April 9, 1926, in Liber 5726 at folio 264 et seq., and at the request of over twenty-five per centum of the holders of the bonds secured thereby, the undersigned substituted trustee, by appointment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, dated July 7, 1930, in Equity Cause No. 51378, will offer for sale at public auction in front of the premises on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1935, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and which is described as follows: Lot numbered Forty-three (43) in square numbered Twenty-six Hundred Eighty-eight (2688) in Morris Cafritz subdivision of part of Pleasant Plains as per plat recorded in the office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Book 81, page 120, together with all buildings and improvements thereon, consisting of the "Cavalier Hotel," known as premises No. 3500 Fourteenth street northwest, together with all furnishings, fittings and fixtures thereon which said trustee is authorized by said deed of trust, to sell and convey.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash on or before the 16th day of October, 1935, balance in two equal installments payable on or before one and two years from date of sale, respectively, with interest thereon at the rate of five and one-half per centum per annum from day of sale, said interest payable semiannually, and to be secured by first deed of trust on the property sold, all cash at the option of the purchaser. The said trustee will receive no bid from anyone offering to bid who shall not at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof deposit with said trustee, as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, a deposit of $25,000, either in cash or certified check on a local bank or trust company, made or indorsed payable to the undersigned trustee, or in lieu thereof bonds of the par value of $50,000 in form transferable by delivery, secured by said deed of trust, said bonds to have all unmatured coupons attached thereto. The deposit of any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him immediately after the sale. The said trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids and withdraw his property from sale. Adjustments with respect to taxes, assessments, insurance, rentals, income from operation of property, interest and all other adjustments shall be made as of the date of the sale. The said trustee, however, will continue to manage and operate said property and collect the income therefrom from date of sale to date of transfer upon existing terms as set forth in said deed of trust. After settlement of sale said trustee will not be responsible for any bills or expenses incurred in the management or operation of said property. All expenses of title examination, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., are to be at the cost of the purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with on or before October 16, 1935; otherwise, the trustee reserves the right to forfeit said deposit or to resell the property at the risk and cost of the defaulting purchaser, upon the foregoing terms, after seven days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or with or without forfeiting the deposit the trustee may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against the defaulting purchaser.

"Cap" Stubbs — A Wonderful Time — By Edwina

MY LAND! I DON'T SEE WHY YOU CARRY ON SO WHEN MILLIE COMES —
MERCY! MILT! DON'T THROW YOUR ASHES ON TH' RUG —
YOU KNOW WHAT MILLIE THINKS OF ASHES ON TH' RUG — OR SMOKING, IF IT COMES TO THAT!
MY LAND! TIPPIE — HAVE YOU GOT FLEAS AGAIN —
I WANT YOU TO KEEP THAT DOG OUTTA TH' HOUSE WHILE MILLIE'S HERE —
MERCY! I NEVER SEE SUCH A FAMILY!

ARE YOU SUPERSTITIOUS?

DICK TRACY — Plans Afoot

SHALL I CLIP OUT THE ARTICLE ABOUT THAT MAN BLAKE CONFESSING.
CERTAINLY — YOU KNOW WE ALWAYS CENSOR ARTICLES THAT CONCERN ANY OF THE PRISONERS.
IF THE TOWNLEY GIRL SAW IT BEFORE THEY'RE READY TO RELEASE HER IT WOULD JUST MEAN TROUBLE FOR US.
AND IN THE PRISON LAUNDRY.
BUT, ESCAPE?? WHY ESCAPE IS IMPOSSIBLE, ISN'T IT?
WHO SAID ANYTHING ABOUT ESCAPE? WE DON'T MEAN CRAWLING OUT THROUGH A HOLE.
BUT YOU SPOKE OF FREEDOM. . . YOU ASKED ME IF I WANTED TO GET OUT OF HERE.
LISTEN 'BLONDIE' — NOW CONCENTRATE — YOU'VE HEARD OF UPRISINGS, HAVEN'T YOU? YOU'VE HEARD OF RIOTS? YOU'VE HEARD OF PRISONS BURNING DOWN HAVEN'T YOU?

THE GUMPS — Playing the Part

EACH DAY MAMA TRIES SOME NEW STORY ON HER LANDLADY — IN CASE THIS EVER COMES TO COURT. MAMA WANTS A WITNESS WHO CAN TESTIFY HOW DESTITUTE SHE WAS LEFT BY HER SON-IN-LAW —
I HAVE A DREADFUL CONFESSION TO MAKE — I HARDLY KNOW HOW TO SAY IT — BUT THIS IS THE DAY MY RENT IS DUE — AND I HAVEN'T A PENNY TO MY NAME —
WHY YOU POOR THING —
YOU JUST FORGET ABOUT THAT RENT, MRS. DE STROSS AND HERE — HERE'S FIVE DOLLARS OF MY OWN — IF IT WILL HELP YOU, YOU'RE WELCOME TO IT — I JUST CAN'T BEAR TO SEE A FINE WOMAN LIKE YOU SUFFER SO
FIVE DOLLARS! OH, 'TWOULD INDEED BE A BLESSING —
OH, BOY — DID I PUT THAT OVER! THAT OLD LEATHER-FACE ACTUALLY HAD A TEAR IN HER EYE — I MISSED MY CALLING — I SHOULD HAVE BEEN AN ACTRESS — ME AND SARAH BERNHARDT!
I BRUISE EASY — BUT I HEAL QUICK!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — The Gentlemen Disagree — By Harry J. Tuthill

Caramba! Me, Dominacker the Great, most strong ruler in the world... trapped like a mouse. No, I don't believe it. It's impossible.
I felt the same way on my first trip.
But, if we are up so high, why do we not feel funny in the head?
Don't worry. You'll get that way later on, when you think we've started downhill.
You know nothing about this machine.... how we get down, or.?
On my first trip, I stepped in here to put out a fire. The next thing I knew I was on my way from 1935 to the alleged year 7324.
My dear Bungle, please do not give me, me, that eye-wash you tell my sweet Chloe about the year 1935. It is too much ... much, much, too much.
Well, this 7324 story is too much for me, too. 7324! My word! What a dizzy notion.

School Opening Delayed As Paralysis Reappears

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tazewell, Va., Sept. 3.—As a result of the appearance of two new cases of infantile paralysis in the county Sunday and a fatality from the malady at Bluefield, W. Va., a joint session of the Tazewell County, Bluefield, W. Va., and North Tazewell boards of health was held here yesterday, resulting in an order that the opening of public schools be delayed from Thursday until September 16.

Eight cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in Tazewell County since July. All cases have been in the Pocahontas area.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Sept. 3.

DICK POWELL is making a political speech from a stage set for a scene in "Thanks a Million"—and in the orchestra sits a number of extras who are paid to be the audience.

Joan Bennett

"Applaud! Applaud!" shouts director Roy Del Ruth to the extras. "All right, Richard, make that speech again. And now don't forget, more applause."

Director Del Ruth keeps calling Powell Richard. His billing on the screen and on his pay check is Dick. Powell seems so strange when called Richard. Of course, that is really his name, but everyone is a little startled every time Director Del Ruth calls him Richard. Everyone including Powell.

The scene is played again. Richard makes the speech. The audience of extras applaud enough to please Director Del Ruth. "It's nice to get your applause now," comments Patsy Kelly. "You may not get it when the picture plays a theater."

• • • •

Another scene with Fred Allen, Patsy Kelly, Ann Dvorak and Dick Powell. Rubinoff and his violin wander about the set. He is always practicing.

Patsy is supposed to say to Fred Allen: "Every time I comb my hair a politician drops out." Instead, she says: "Every time I comb my hair Rubinoff drops out." It gets a howl on the set. Rubinoff would like the line left in, although it hasn't a thing to do with the story.

Rubinoff is really the show on the set. He only uses his expensive violin in the close-ups and a fake one for the long shots.

• • • •

FRED ALLEN, playing a scene, makes a mistake which is common in flicker making. Allen has a long speech which he addresses to Dick Powell, and during it he has to call Powell Eric, which is his monicker in the flicker. Allen does the long speech and Director Del Ruth says: "Fine. Only when we do it again, call him Eric, instead of Dick."

Allen begins the speech again. Again he calls him Dick when he reaches the line. Only this time Allen is aware of it and stops the "take" to bawl himself out.

It's an easy thing, but many actors often forget the story name of the actor. When he does it again, Allen says: "It should be cool in here the way I'm blowing." Leaving this set, I walk over to another sound stage where Joan Bennett is playing a scene from "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." Montague Love is making a speech. "That is the order of the casino, Miss Bennett," he says.

• • • •

Then Mr. Love quickly stops the speech. "I'm sorry, Miss Bennett," he says. He has called her Miss Bennett. Her name in the story is Miss Barclay. The same mistake again.

Director Steve Roberts calls for another rehearsal. Miss Bennett and the actors at the table at the noted gambling casino run through their lines again. Then they play it for the camera.

Director Roberts, after the scene, says to them: "That was perfect. But let's do it again. We can do it better."

JAMES CAGNEY looks very natty dressed as a dandy of the pre-Civil War days in the the "Frisco Kid." Cagney is wearing a plaid, form-fitting suit, a bowler hat, has sideburns and high heels on his boots. He is the tough guy and the fashion plate of the Barbary Coast.

Cagney makes an interesting comment on his flicker career. "You couldn't picture me playing a costume role like this when you saw me in 'Public Enemy' could you?" Cagney went on to show how a scene in every picture got him a different role in his next flicker. He continued tracing his pictures up until "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It was his role in "Lady Killer," which, oddly enough, won him the chance to portray Bottom. Max Reinhardt saw this flicker in the projection room and decided Cagney was the actor. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" hasn't been released yet, but because of his performance in that flicker, Warners are going to give him more costume pictures. "Robin Hood" is now being prepared for him.

• • • •

Mitchell and Durant are in a bus playing a scene for a flicker tentatively titled, "Ball of Fire." Director James Tingling has them singing, "California, Here I Come." This outburst of song in the bus, which will be only a flash on the screen, is being made so that the audience will know how Mitchell and Durant got to California between scenes. The authors forgot to put it in the scenario.

Director Tingling has them rehearsing "California, Here I Come." They sing it again and again; or to be more accurate, they shout it again and again. In fact, they rehearse shouting it so long that when Director Tingling is ready for the "take," Mitchell and Durant are hoarse and can't do it.

Highway to Dan's Rock, Scenic Point, Is Sought

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., Sept. 3.—Dan's Rock, scenic point, with an altitude of over 3,000 feet, is to be reached by an improved road, if plans of Frostburg citizens materialize. A delegation composed of G. Gale Townsend, George E. Pearce, Philip Hartig, jr., I. Dale Snodgrass, Dr. W. Oliver McLean and E. Earle Cobey, appeared before the Allegany County commissioners, who approved a works project for a road from the national highway at Eckhart Flat, just east of Frostburg, to Dan's Rock.

Mark W. Roe, project engineer for the MERA, submitted a sketch of the proposed route which would pass through the farm of the Consolidation Coal Co. to the Hoffman road, to Vale Summit and thence up Dans Rock trail.

BABUR, conqueror of India and founder of the Mogul dynasty, came to the throne of Ferghana at the age of 12, following the reign of his father, Omar Shiek. When he was only 14 he conquered Samarkand, then lost it and his own kingdom as well when his nobles revolted. Eventually, he regained both territories, and later made himself master of India.

A man given to personal excesses, he turned to fervid prayer when his favorite son, Hymayun, seemed to be dying. He prayed to Allah, asking that his own life be taken and that of his son spared. In the face of strenuous objections by his ministers, he continued his plea—and Babur at length was taken ill.

Day by day he grew weaker, and at the same time his son grew stronger. Finally his son was well enough to leave his sick bed—and on that day Babur died.

West Virginian Injured Seriously in Accident

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., Sept. 3.—R. G. Pennington, 58, of near Parsons, who was struck by a car driven by George West, 19, of Bretz, is a patient in the City Hospital at Elkins, where it was said he is suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries.

Mrs. Jean Swadley, 28, daughter of Daniel Lipscomb, of Hambleton, and Howard Pennington, of near Parsons, suffered serious lacerations in the same accident. They stepped in the path of Vest's car as he was going to the office of a doctor with an injured child. Vest was released on bond for action of the grand jury September 17 on a reckless driving charge.

An Autumn Compromise Frost Flecked Crepe

by William Laville

Most of the first fall dresses have a bit of warmth in them. They're planned so that they can be worn on a really cool day, without a coat.

Such a crepe is Frost Flecked Capello, and the frosty threads are just warm enough to keep out the first touch of frost. It has a lovely silvery effect, too, which lends interest to the dress, and makes it just a little "dressy" looking, without needing much ornamentation.

Following the Paris dictate of velvet with wool, or with the woolly crepes, this Carolyn dress has a velvet collar and scarf, and a velvet girdle. There's enough contrast in the fabric and the velvet, so there is no contrast of color. The dress is in all green, brown or a glowing tone of wine. Rhinestone spikes trim the belt, and give and added accent to the dress. Misses' sizes.
